U.N. Proposes Building Expansion To Provide Room for 170 Nations

By KATHLEEN TELTSCH Special to The New York Time

• UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Nov. 10—The United Nations administration has pro-posed to the 145 member governments the first major expansion of the organiza-tion's building facilities in a dozen years to enable it to accommodate up to 170 from delegations reluctant to approve the

ountries

The building program, which would re-quire a $47 million outlay over three years, would add a large conference rcom, expand the seating arrangements in the General Assembly Hall and several other meeting rooms, and provide addi-tional cining facilities and a bigger lounge for the diplomats. The plan also would make available more room for storage and printing. The six-acre area of lawns, shade trees and gardens at the northern end of the United Nations enclave would be preserved, according to the preliminary plans for the renovations. The plans were provided by Harrison & Abromovitz, the architectural firm that designed the Unit-two-level underground building as an ex-tension to the existing premises beneath the grassed area and the replacement of the lawns virtually jotaci.

The new building proposal was presented to delegations in a report from Secretary General Kurt Waldheim that sald the United Nations beadquarters, which was built 25 years ago, had be come strained by the influx of new coun-tries and by the recent practice of grant-ing observer status—and with it seating tops with bar and coffee shop where

The funds would come out of the United Natioos budget, for which the United States pays a 25-percent share and the Soviet Union 12.9 percent Janan. West Germany 12.9 percent, Japan, West Germany, France, China and Britain also pay large shares in descending order. The building renovations would be carried out in stages, beginning in Janu-ary 1978, so as to create minimum inter-ference with scheduled meetings,

The recovation in the Assembly Hall would cost $13,473,697 to $14,134,811, depending on whether the members select a plan that would have three delegations sitting elbow-to-elbow at each bank of tables with the one in the middle deprived ed Nations complex along the East River. tables with the one in the middle deprived The plans call for construction of a seat two deleastions to table

British Make a New Bid To Break the Deadlock At Rhodesia Conference

Special to The New York Times

GENEVA. Nov. 10-Britain made a new effort today at the conference on the future of Rhodesia here to break the deedlock on the date for legal independence under black majority rule. Black leaders said the move resulted in no progress, but the white delegation disagreed.

After a series of separate morning meetings, with Ivor Richard, the British chairman, the four black leaders said they remained adamant that the independence must come within 12 months of the end of the conference.

However, Pieter van der Byl, Foreign Jinister in the white-controlled Government of Prime Minister Ian D. Smith, said after seeing Mr. Richard in the afternoon that the conference was "looking a hit hetter.

Mr. van der Byl would not elaborate but his remark was attributed to the chairman's having apparently suggested a way to outline the processes for trans-ferring power to the bleck majority with-out actually setting a date.

Mr. Richard, who returned to Geneva last night after a 24-hour visit to London for consultations, said at the end of the day that in his meetings with the delega-tions some of the ground explored was "new" while some was "well worn."

The "well worn" was the rehashing of positions on the date issue, which, a Brit-ish spokesman later said, was "almost entirely" the subject of the chairman's pri-vate discussions with the delegation lead-1005.

The resolutions supported efforts by South Africa's black majority to seize power "by all possible meens." They also called for a complete economic boycott, a mandatory arms embargo and the oust-er of South Africa from all international sports. In addition, they condemned "col-laboration" between Israel and South Africa. Mr. Muller described them in his statement as a shocking example of the length to which the third world and the Commu-nists and their allies were prepared to go to achieve their own political and ideological ends.

An Encouraging Sign

The Foreign Minister went on: "They ignore altogether the well-being and the true aspirations of the people of South Africa, which they so hypocritically pre-tend to promote. And, in complete contra-diction of the principles of the U.N. Charter, they advocate and encourage armed violence and aggression in and against

"These resolutions, as well as recent events in southern Africa, leave one with the overwhelming impression that South Africa's enemies have only one real goal —and that is, for their own ends, to do everything in their power to prevent peaceful evolution in South Africa, and, by violence and bloodshed, to bring to power a government of their own choos-ing." Mr. Muller, noting what he described as the "extravagant nature" of the resolu-tions, said that more countries than usual

U.S. AIDES SAID TO ASK FOR PRESSURE ON IRAN But Kissinger Reported to Resist

Threatening an Arms Cutoff Over the Price of Oil

By LESLIE H. GELB

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10-High Ford Administration officials are urging the United States to tell the Iranians that an increase in the price of oil would lead to reconsideration of the multi-billion-dollar American program of arms sales to their country, according to well-placed officials.

The officials said that Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger rejected the strategy of threatening to link a price rise to arms sales once before and was likely to do so again, though other officials felt that he might reconsider in view of the continuing worldwide economic deterioration. He is said to believe that threats will not work, serving only to jeopardize the overriding American interest in good relations with Iran.

eopardize the overriding American interest in good relations with Iran. High officials in the State and Treasury Departments and the Pentagon want the Administration to convey privately to Iran a message of this sort: If you increase the price of oil, it will sour attitudes toward Iran in the United States, and even if we wanted to continue selling you arms, it would be virtually impossible to do so.

Meeting Due Next Month

The oil ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are to meet in mid-December in Qatar. Iran is regarded as the leader of a group seeking a 10 to 20 percent increase in prices, now about $11.50 a barrel from the Persian Gulf.

While Iran is regarded as a powerful force in OPEC, there are 12 other members, including Saudi Arabia, the largest single producers, so Iran will not be able to dictate a decision.

Mr. Kissinger and other sensor Administration officials have been saying that any increase would have catastrophic effects on such nations as Britain and Italy as well as on the developing countries. Nonetheless, be has consistently resisted efforts to use what all agree could be the most effective and most risky bargaining lever-the arms sales to Iran.

United States sales to Iran have been averaging $2 billion a year for the last five years; when Mr. Kissinger visited Teberan in August he talked of $10 billion more in highly sophisticated military systems the coming years.

Just before Mr. Kissinger was to depart for his meeting with Shah Mohammed Riza Pahlevi, the issue of linking oil prices and arms sales was seriously broached in the Administration for the first time, officials said. Mr. Kissinger agreed to raise the issue, but only in relation to the Shah's intention of buying plants to reprocess spent fuel from nuclear reactors.

Cutoff Required by Congress

At that time Congress had just passed legislation requiring a cutoff of virtually all forms of aid to any country that purchased reprocessing plants or other facilities that could lead to the production of weapons-grade plutonium for nuclear explosions.

To discusde the Shah from bunuing th reprocessing plaots and locating them on Iranian territory, the officials related, Mr. Kissinger assured him concerning Iran's importance to the United States as a regional power and pledged that it would have continuing access to the most advanced conventional arms. Several weeks later the Administration announced that it had agreed to sell Iran 160 F-16 jet fighter aircraft, regarded as the front-line American fighter of the future, with a price tag of $3.4 billion. Iran is already taking delivery of the F-14 fighter-bomber, the most advanced craft in the Air Force inventory.

According to the sources, Mr. Kissinger rejected the idea of threatening to halt arms because be believed that the United States should continue to supply them even if Iran raised oil prices. "He did not want the Shah to call his hluff," an official explained, "and then have to sell the arms anyway."

Mr. Kissinger, who has maintained that Iran is an important stabilizing and anti-Soviet influence in the volatile Persian Gulf area, decided to use economic grounds in making his case to the Shah against a price increase. The officials said that he argued that an increase would wreak havoc on the international economic system and would be as harmful to Iran in the long run as to the countries that would suffer initially.

Senators on Israeli Visit Suggest Carter Appoint Kissinger Special Envoy

Spenial to The New York Times

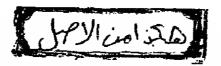

JERUSALEM, Nov. 10—Six United States senators today recommended that Jimmy Carter appoint Henry A. Kissinger as a special envoy to initiate new peace negotiations between the Arabs and the Israelis.

• The recommendation was made at a news conference by Senator Abraham A. Ribicoff, Democrat of Connecticut, who is heading a delegation of 13 senators on a tour of the Middle East. He said that 1977 might be a year of diplomatic movement and that the United States was the logical nation to play a leadership role.

"I don't know anybody in the world who can do a better job on this than Secretary Kissinger," Mr. Ribicoff said. Five other senators present—four Democrats and a Republican—endorsed the idea with varying degrees of enthusiasm. Howard H. Baker Jr., Republican of Tennessee, said, "I think Senator Ribicott has a heli of a good idea." while John Glenn, Democrat of Ohio, said that if Mr. Carter were interested in someone "with obvious skill such as Secretary Kissinger, then certainly he should be used." Other favorable comments came from Howard W. Cannon of Nevada, Wendell H. Ford of Kentucky and Dale Bumpers of Arkansas.

The delegation, which leaves tomorrow for Jordan, Egypt and Iran, has been conducting a review of Middle East policy and has been assessing what restrictions should be placed on a proposed sale of nuclear reactors to Israel, Iran and Egypt to assure that they not be used for military purposes.

U.S. Election Affects Plans

The schedule for the Arab initiative has been changed by the outcome of the American electico. If President Ford had won, the Arabs would have moved quick-ly. Now the feeling is that Jimmy Carter must be given time to define his Middle East policy. No real move is expected until late spring at best, Arab diplomats now say.

In the meantime, there will be talks between the leading Arab countries and the Palestinians on a new definition of the so-called Cairo agreements, under which Palestinian armed units in Lehanon are to be confided to the southern part of the country.

The concept is simple: Sand Laurie selis their exquisitely failored classic American and European cut suits to the most expensive stores throughout the country.

They will continue to sell to stores in New York. but not under the Saint Laurie label, and offer their vast collection (over 25,000 suits) direct to the consumer.

Nothing like Saint Leurie exists in New York. To our knowledge, anywhere.

The enormous selection, impeccable tailoring. costliest fabrics with the prices at the factory ranging from $115 to $210, turns the most critical shopper into a delighted customer.

Its Backers at Texas Meeting Hail Effort to Link Schooling to Jobs, but Doubts Remain on Aspects

By GENE L MAEROFF dal to The New York Times

HOUSTON, Nov. 10-More than 6,000 pporters of career education are meeting hera thiis week to take stock of a movement that in less than six years bas reached into thousands of school systems and caused a reappraisal of the relation-ship between the roles of education and work

"This is probably the most subatantial reform movement to occur lin the history of education in such a short time," said Dr. Sidney P. Marland Jr., who was hailed in the Astrohail as the "father of career education."

Dr. Marland, now president of the College Entrance Examination Board, originated and promoted the concept of care education io 1971, when he was the United States Commissioner of Education.

Career education involves giving youn people occupational information and ex-perience through their studies and by observation and participation in the job

Such an approach bas had growing ap-peal during the 1970's as competition for jobs bas intensified and more Americans have demaoded that educational preparation be linked to the realities of the man ketplace.

Greater Mntivatinn Seen

Proponeots of career aducation contend that the concept has added a practical and tangible element to education that enhances the motivation and achievement of students, some of whom might otherwise not recognize the value of schooling to their lives.

Yet aven in the midst of this week's celebration of career education, sponsored by the Federal Office of Education, some of the controversies that afflicted the movement in its early days persisted. Dispersed among the panelists and par-tlcipants at the conference were people tho say they would like to support career education but continue to have reservations about some aspects of the concept. They wonder whether career education may be used to exploit youth labor, to lessen the amount of time devoted to the study of the hasics and to funnel the children of the economically deprived into the least desirable jobs.

Representatives of organized labor, who say they are perturbed because they have not been adequately consulted duriog the development of career education programs, are perhaps the most skeptical,

"There has been a bias toward management in career education," said Reese Hammond, education director of the lo-ternational Union of Operating Engineers. "This is probably because management sees career education as an opportunity to get a youngster at the age of 14 or 15 and put him in a position that exposes him to the world of work only through management's eyes."

Despite such reservations, the idea of career education has made considerable inroads in the thinking of educators. Implementation is still in the insipient stage, the concept

A survey done for the Office of Educa-tion last year found that although only 3 percent of the country's 16,000 school districts had completed the steps toward fully instituting programs, more than balf were engaged in some staff development for career education and had introduced some aspects of the idea.

Some of the programs in operation have produced results that Federal officials maintain prove the merits of career education

In a review here of program evalua-tions, Dr. Sidney High of the Office of Education's career education division, cited examples of students in Lincoln County, W.Va., and Newark, N.J., who made galos in mathematics exceeding those of students not in career education. Also, according to Dr. Higb, career education students in Arizona's Pima County and Cochise County showed higher scores in tests of occupational deci-sioo-making skills, and those in Pontiac. Mich., who were trained in job-seeking skills had a 4-to-1 success rate over others to getting hired.

Sto Million in U.S. Funds

The career educatioo division is providing $10 million a year for such demonstration programs and at least as much or more is being spent on career educa-tion by other Federal agencies. An argument made in behalf of career education is that it can be a vehicle to spur interest in specific subjects. It is or computer science. for instance, can learn the related mathematics by study-ing their applications in those career fields. said that students interested in aviation

However, mathematics teachers do not

"We don't want to ignore the applica-tions that could make mathematics more interesting," said Dr. James D. Gates, executive director of the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics. "But we don't want to teach mathematics through applications initially. You should teach mathematics as a spiral kind of subject, mathematics as a spirar kind of Subject, building up concepts each year and tak-ing every youngster as far as he or she can go with the concepts, and let the applications follow."

Today lam going to be green."

Several months ago we began our Tricentennial Program by asking for your thoughts on life in America by the year 2076. We anticipated some very interesting predictions of the future. And that's exactly what we received. More than 50,000 responses came in from every state in the country.

"Today I am going to be green. I always enjoy being green best of all. Yesterday I was yellow and the day before brown. It's really nice being able to be a different color every day. My brother is pink today and when we go to school together I imagine that we shall look somewhat like a rose with its petals, the pink and green together.

"I heard that long ago, maybe a hundred years or something like that, people couldn't change color each day and had to be either brown or white or black or yellow. How dull that must have been! Imagine! It's just so much nicer now the new way, everyday being a different color, and never knowing ahead what color you are going to be.

"My great-grandmother used to tell my mother about how people tried to band together by color. What confusion there would be if people tried that now. Everyday you would have to try to find new bands and the next day they would be broken by the color changes. Now we just all enjoy each other because we do, and that's it, and the colors only help to make the parties pretty. I'm happy it's like this, aren't you?"

Your ideas were intelligent and imaginative and show a significant insight into the problems and opportunities that face the nation.

One request we made was to imagine that when you got up this morning, you found that it was the year 2076. We asked you to tell us of the many changes you saw and what you felt about this new world of the future.

The responses we received proved to be most imaginative. And we wanted to share one of our favorites.

We plan to make a book available containing some of the most interesting letters we've received. If you would like to obtain a free copy, please write to us.

New York City's Presidential Vote Fell in Relation to Rest of the State was down 4 percentage points from the 1972 election and 10 percentage points from the 1960 Presidential election.

BY FRANK LYNN

The dropoff, part of a continuing trend total votes, although they rank fourth in recent years, was particularly signifi-cant because the city and its fiscal crisis was the ninth-ranking county in total was a major issue in the campaign and the city was credited with a key role in Jimmy Carter's capture of the state and its 41 electoral votes.

The Democratic Presidential nominee won the city by about 675,000 votes, of the total population voting last Tuesmore than enough to counter President day ranged from a low of 24 percent Ford's majorities in the suburbs and upstate, but the city's share of the state to 45 percent in Albany County, even vote was still considerably less than its share of the population. Both the subur-ban and upstate counties produced greater shares of the state vote than their population would indicate.

In 1960, the voter turnout as a percent-age of population ranged from 38 percent in Brooklyn and Manhattan to 57 percent in Albany County, where many politically active state workers live. That was one explanation for both the President Ford's and Mr. Carter's cam-paigning on Long Island in their last aps in this state in the final five lays of the campaign. Comparisons Unfavorable to City

Suburban Figures Rise

Suburban Figures Rise The four suburban counties—Nassau, Suffolk, Westchester and Rockland— provided just short of a quarter of the statewide vote, 23.2 percent, although statewide vote, 23.2 percent, although their combined population is a shade over a fifth of the state, 20.5 percent. In 1960, the suburban figures were 17.2 percent of the population and 18 percent of the growing areas of the state. The city has an estimated 41.6 percent of the state population, but had only 32.6 percent of the vote last Tuesday. In 1960, the population figure was 46.1 percent, and the vote figure, 42.4 percent. In contrast, the suburbs and upstate consistently have a higher vote percent-age than population percentage. The two Long Island counties, for example, have 14.4 percent of the population, according to Census Burean estimates as of July 1975, but had 15.9 percent of the state-wide vote last week. Westchester and Rockland have 6.1

The statistics indicate not only that is the city population shrinking in absolute numbers and in relation to growing areas outside the city, particularly the suburbs, but also that the city resident is less likely and the suburbanite more likely to vote. This trend was particularly evident in black and Puerto Rican districts in the city, where the total vote last week was half or less than half the total vote in white districts.

Politically, it means that the parties are more likey to select candidates and emphasize issues acceptable to the sub-urbs and upstate.

urbs and upstate. Daniel P. Moynihan, the Democratic Senate candidate, polled more votes in Nassau County than he did in the Bronx, once a Democratic stronghold. Mr. Moyni-han also won statewide by nearly 600,000 votes even though he did not have the endorsement of the liberal New Demoendorsement of the liberal New Demo-cratic Coalition and the Council of Elected Black Democrats. Suburban and up-state Democrats took up any slack left by those two city groups, sacred cows to whom politicians traditionally pay obeisance.

Other Notable Trends

The gap between population and vote The shrinking city vote was only one of several shifting trends with great po-litical significance in the Presidential election in the state. Other trends includ-statewide vote. The comparable figures ed the following: Although Kings (Brooklyn) is still the and 5.1 percent of vote.

When Singer introduced electronic sewing in 5, our first machine was more expensive than the most Expensive mechanical machine.

Now we're introducing the world's second electronic machine. This one is less expensive.

Which means Singer was not only first to revolutionize sewing with cleation and the first to give it a conventional price.

And that means we've made it possible for you to own the most astonishing concept in sewing machines since the sewing machine.

Because now sewing is suddenly so simple, so foolproof, it's the difference between artistry and drudgery.

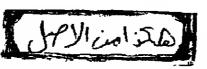

Like all electronics, the new Diana* 560 machine is made with a brain. A tiny preprogrammed memory bank that replaces the 120 mechanical parts that control stitch selection in the conventional machine.

To tell the brain what you want, you simply press a button. Then the brain tells the needle what to do. You can sew 12 stitch patterns, change stitches without stopping the machine. Make a buttonhole automatically. Do all kinds of creative sewing without levers. Or cams. Or discs to change.

What's more, because we've replaced so many moving parts with electronic circuits, the Diana 560 machine is quieter than mechanical machines. And smoother. And lighter.

The Diana 560 machine. The world's second electronic sewing machine. Everything about it is extraordinary. Except the price.

Island Where Killing Took Place Known as Site of Illicit Activities

THE NEW YORK TIMES, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1976

By ARI L. GOLDMAN

INDIAN ISLAND, L.I., Nov. 10—This mile-square nature sanctuary has been the scene of many forbidden activities in the last few years—hunting, campiog, the making of fires, and breerdrinking. Last Friday night, it became the scene ow hat the Suffolk Couoty police are calling a murder.

It was on this small island in the Great South Bay that 19-year-old Thomas Fitzgerald was stabbed to death duriog a Reserve Officers Training Corps unit program. The incident has been called "an accidental hazing" during an initiation rite for the Persbing Rifles honor society, but the police continued to search the island today for more information about the killing.

The people who live across the canal from the island in a section called American Venice, in the Town of Babylon, said that they hoped the incident would lead to the stopping of illegal activities. "I'm not surprised by anything that happens over there," said Raymond Weir, who lives on the canal. Mr. Weir, 68, said that the tin roof

Mr. weit, bo, said that the firm foor of his small house was pockmarked by the shells from the guns of those illegally hunting on the island. Noise from beer parties sometimes gets so bad, he said, that he has had to call the county park rangers, who are responsible for patroling the area.

The rangers have seized on the incident to complain about cutback in personnel. Robert Mackreth, the secretary of the Suffolk County Park Ranger Benevolent Association, appeared before the County Legislature yesterday and said the death could have been avoided if there had been more patrols. The Legislature was considering the 1977 county budget, which would trim the curreot ranger staff by layoffs from 92 to 25.

"Abolition of ranger positioos must not be approved." Mr. Mackreth told the Legisture. "Iostead, all existing vacancies must be filled. It is too late to save the life of Thomas Fitzgerald, but perhaps other such deaths may be prevented."

Cuts Later Approved The Legislature later approved the cuts. Indian Island was acquired by the couoty in 1965 from a private owner. A footbridge that once connected the island to the mainland was later taken down by the county to preserve the area as a nature sanctuary.

The only way to cross the 50-foot canal now is by boat, and it was a rubber raft that brought Mr. Fitzgerald and 23 other R.O.T.C. members to the island last week. The rangers complain that they do not even have a boat at their disposal and must borrow a small craft from residents to patrol the area. This mornlog, Frank Losasso, a couo-ty ranger, borrowed a boat and took a visitor to the island.

Thick brush with 8-foot reeds covers most of the perimeter of the small island. But after peoetrating 30 to 40 feet of brush, one comes to a wide clearing of sand. Beer bottles, spent rifle sbells and camp-fire settings are scattered about the sand in the clearing, which is protected from the harsh winds of the Great South Bay by the foliage. A path through tail reeds leads to another clearing. It is there that Mr. Fitzgerald was stabbed with a bayooet.

Fitzgerald was stabbed with a bayooet. Detectives were busy today examining the scene and taking measurements in what Chief of Detectives David Buckley called "routine investigative procedures following a homicide." "It's a tragedy," said Mr. Lossaso, as he watched a police tauoch go by. "It we had the manpower to have been more sense than the loan most people get.

1. You pay less each month. So you have more each month.

If you're like most people, you may think a 36-month loan is the most sensible way to finance a car. Not so. On any amount over $3,500, you can get a Citibank 48-Month Car Loan and pay less each month—about $30 less on a $3,500 loan. And because you pay less, you have more to sock away or invest or spend on other things.

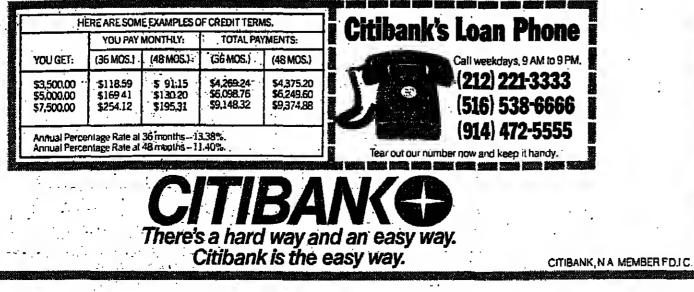

2. You pay a lower annual percentage rate of only 11.4%.

You may also think the percentage rate on a short-term car loan is lower than on a longer loan. Not so. The rate on a Citibank 48-Month Car Loan is a low 11.4%. Compared to over 13% on most 36-month loans offered by banks.

3. You can get it faster and easier on The Loan Phone?

You may think you have to make a special trip to the bank to apply for a car loan. Not so. You can apply for Citibank's 48-Month Car Loan just by calling The Loan Phone. Or, if you prefer, you can still visit any one of our 270 convenient branches.

The Citibank 48-Month Car Loan. The easy way is the sensible way too. Call or see us before November 13.

About New York

Indians Who Don't Fit the Stereotype

We have all heard something of the city's American Indian community: Iroquois irooworkers sure-footed above the white man on the skeletal frames of new skyscrapers. And so forth and so oo toward another of the peculiar legends that whites seem to prefer for reds. Now, however, maoy of the iron-working Indians, left jobless by the city's great construction depression, have gooe hack to Canadian reserva-tions or to places more promising in jobs. And many of the remaining American Indians are even more interesting than soaring ironworkers.

They are the Indians who were born here in the first place and who have had a special aort of half-life troubled not only hy racial hias but also hy isolation from tribal roots and places and by a search for identity that can flare up suddenly on the mean streets, often to their own amazement.

Such a moment came in the life of Barbara Nehemias, Bronx-born of a Mohican mother, during her junior year at Aquinas Hall High School when she decided to challenge conventional parochial school history on the early Catholic missionaries who worked and died trying to convert Indians. She had begun reading books offer-ing Indian-oriented history. That, plus her mother's care to make sure she spent part of each summer back at the reservation in St. Regis in upstate New York, and her childhood frustrations at hearing herself and her brother called silly names like "Powow," plus countless other sparks led her to write a book review that "stunned the nuns," as she recalled.

"I said Isaac Joques had no right to Christianze the Indians, and that when the stories of his torture were examined there should be little surprise that he was abused, in turn, for meddling with another culture.".

Strong medicine, as Indians say io the movies. And from there Miss Nehemias became "active and vocal." first as as SEEK studeot at City College, then as a dropout who went back to the SL Regis reservation for two years to think about things, and eventually to get bored with the rural-ness of things. She traveled back from birthright to birthplace and works now at the task of trying to reach the 10,000 Indians scattered through the city in her job as a communications specialist at the American Indian Community House on American Indian Community House on East 38th Street. Sometimes this job means putting down iovitations to tawdry promotioo schemes. "A televisioo oews crew wanted to get us involved in a Thanks-giving dinner thing, and 1 had to ex-plain-that, to me, Thanksgiving was the Last Supper."

City-born Indians generally get knowledge of the family reservation only through a relative's tales, with otherwise being a non-Indian exdoes not say so, hut Mr. Wallace's commitment to Indian culture, as job program director at the Community House, seems rooted not in any camp fire carping hut in the most exotic sort of experience. This was in being singled out through the accident on his beritage for special minority program eligi-bility at Dartmouth College (Class of '75) where, he said, he came to know what sorts of ostracism the world can offer.

"Dartmouth became a tool to serve the Indian community, nothing more," he said. Mr. Wallace did not elaborate, hut he left the suggestion that ha had found a bit of Wounded Knee at Hanover.

On DeGraw Street in South Brook-lyn, Muriel Miguel, an actress with the handsome dark beauty of her Rappa-hannock and Cuna tribal backgrounds. lives io the plaio frame house her grandmother koew seven decades ago when she was a midwife fresh from the Virginia reservation. Miss Miguel's life seems a telescopic race from child-hood prejudice and poverty through several great militancies of our time, particularly femioism and the Ameri-can Indiao Movemeot. Now ahe is off on her own somewhat

Now ane is off on her own autematical as the director of the Spiderwoman Theatre Workshop, a freewheeling act-ing group of six women who attempt rather scathing indictmeets of male abuse of females and females' abuse of one enother even in the unlikely of one another, even in the unlikely aetting of the femioist movement.

"Spiderwoman is the spirit who gave the gift of weaving to the Hopi," Miss Miguel explained. "She taught them to leave a flaw in the weave in order to let the spirit escape, On stage, we weave our personal stories into a tapestry about women and the kinds of violence they experience."

The group's arrows seem to spare no one, even some of the males of the AIM movement who, Miss Miguel recalla, would plan great egalitarian protests yet always seem to put a woman to making the coffee.

"A lot of women at Wounded Knee participated just as heavily as the men," she said. "But when you're used as recreation and not as a person, that's no revolution. It's the same old thing."

Her sister and Spiderwoman colleague, Gloria Mojica, agrees and tells of the roundabout ways an Indian woman can attempt to pass cultural muster. In her case, her pure Indian features attracted taunts in her childhood from what she called "Mafia neighbors" on President Street, and evectually she became the wife of a white professor at Oberlin. This marriage failed as did her sister's

"The whole faculty wife trip," she said, smilling at the thoroughness of her attempt. "We were freaks as chil-dren," she said. "And we ran away from the hurt as soon as we could."

At a distance, one can make out what Jobn Updike is up to in "Marry Me: A Romance," the eighth novel and 20th book he has published in his prodigiously productive career. At a distance, one can discern that he has writteo a more or less psychologically realistic story, yet framed it in such a way that we aren't supposed to identify with the characters or take their prohlems too seriously. The story concerns two suburban Coonecticut couples, Jerry and Ruth Cooant and Richard and Sally Mathias, each of whom has three young children, Jerry Cohant and Sally Mathias are in the midst of a heated affair with each other-an affair of widey beach trysts, secret trips to Washington and 10 A.M. telephone talks io the presence of the bahysitter. They would like to leave their respective partners but must cope with questions of loyalty, the children, God's punishment and the possibility that they only desire each other because

Their passioo is realistically played out, at least to the extent that Mr. Updike evokes, as only he can with his exact and graceful prose, precisely what it must feel like to be caught in auch an unteoable yet compelling predicameot. Vet at the same time he tries to

Yet at the same time, be tries to pusb the reader away from this story, or rather he tries to pull the story away from his reader. He subtitles the novel "A Romance," as if to make light of its domestic storm and stress. He sets its time io the early years of the Keooedy Presidency, as if to say this happened long ago in quite another era. He assigns Jerry Cooant the profession of cartoooist-animator, with the specific job, during the time of the story, of creating "a series of 30-second spots plugging freedom in uoderdeveloped couotries"; he fills his descriptive passages with references to paintings and photographs, and he refuses to describe Jerry's and Sally's infatuation with each other in anything but the most cliched terms—all as if to remind us that this was a time of illusion when images mattered more than substances.

Midlife Anxieties

He even seems to denigrate the images that oerhaps still ought to matter because the substances they reflect can never be known except through faith—the midlife anxiety over death that moves Jerry to see to Sally the possibility of temporal paradise, or the Puritan sense of sin that interferes with his decision to commit himself to her. As Jerry himself says at one point, "Maybe our trouble is that we live in the twilight of the old morality, and there's just enough to torment us, and not enough to hold us in."

And just in case we have gotten too caoght up io the realistic predicament of the story, Mr. Updike has provided three different endings-one in which Jerry goes off with Sally to their dream-state of Wyoming, one in which the travels with his wife and children for a recuperative stay in the south of France and one in which be goes hy himself to St. Croix and discovera in "the existence of this place a dimension in which he did go, as was right . . . and stand, timid and exultant, above the downcast eyes of her gracious, sorrowing face, and say to Sally, 'Marry Me.'" It's as if Mr. Updike were saying, take your pick; it's all quaint and illusory, however it turns out.

Weighing and Writhing

The trouble, at least for this reader, is that it's never quaint and illusory. One grows too deeply involved in the domestic drama, weighs too seriously the relative claims of familial responsibility and erotic passion, takes Mr. Up-dike too much at his incomparably seductive word. One worries about the children, even though, surprisingly, they are described as if they were merely objects (perhaps Mr. Updike has done so in order to even up the case for iofidelity). One writhes in sympathy for the betrayed, especially since they invariably behave as good generous sports (amazing how Mr. Updike retains the reader's sympathy for every-oce involved io the story). One cheers when, during a coofrontation scene between the two couples. Ruth Conant remarks: "If we all had to sweat for our food we wouldn't bave time for this-this folly. We're all so spoiled we stink."

In short, I cared about the people in "Marry Me" and I found their sychologically realistic problems altogether relevant to present times. So everything that Mr. Updike does to distance me from bis story-from shruggiog it off as a mere "romance" to indulging his tendency to write show-offy descriptive passages-came at me like so many slaps in the face. Of course it may be that I am hopelessly behind the times in taking the moral issues of "Marry Me" seriously. Or it may be that Mr. Updike has written a novel abead of its times, and that In another decade or so its now uodetectable ironies will come into relief aod it will seem, like several other Updike novels, such as "The Centaur" and "Of the Farm," a better book than it first appeared, But for the time being at least, by taking the subjects of marital fidelity and the viability of the 'nuclear family, and treating them as if they were quaint anachronisms Mr. Updike seems less to have ascended to a long-run perspective and more to have simply ducked important issues.

School Bias Charge...

The charges of discrimination leveled against the city's public school system by the Federal Government cootain an odd mixture of legitimate and illogical criticism. The report by the Civil Rights Office of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare exposes practices which work to the detriment of racial minorities and of women in the competition for teaching and aupervisory jobs. Regrettably, the investigators have confused what is theoretically desirable with what is practically attainable.

The report is on firm ground when it challenges some of the examination and licensing procedures which erect Aigher burdles in this city than exist in other school systems. Some of these procedures for the licensing of teachers are currently io litigatioo; others, affecting supervisors, have already been modified by the courts. But there can be little question that conservative forces in the system have consistently impeded reform.

This is also the reason for the snail's pace at which romen have moved into supervisory posts-a particularly iodefensible situation in a profession whose rank and file ia predominantly female. The fact that women have fared better in this city's schoola than almost anywhere else in the country is no valid reason why discriminatory barriers ought not to be a matter of concern to Federal investigators.

Far more questionable is the report's complaint that too many black and Puerto Rican teachers have been assigned to schools in which these minorities make up the majority of the student body. This criticism seems to ignore the fact that decentralization empowers local community school boards to hire teachers and supervisors, Indeed, the demand in predominantly black sections for greater numbers of black teachers and principals was among the key reasons for decentralization in the first place,

. Rational Response

Sohool Chancellor Irving Anker has underscored the futility of discussing hiring procedures at a time when. the system's major problem is one of laying off teachers. This does not make corrective steps irrelevant, if only to preveot discrimination in the rehiring of teachers as retirements or improved city finances may make it possible to bring back some of the dismissed teachers.

Mr. Anker is also right in pointing to his own efforts for legislative action designed to make teacher assignments more equitable. Unfortunately, the far more effective lobbying forces of the United Federation of Teachers and of the supervisory establishment helped to scuttle such proposals. It would be a serious mistake for local school officials to dig in their heels against the Federal critique. It would be equally wrong for the Federal officials to threaten the withholding of bundreds of millions of Federal aid dollars-a peoalty that could only make a bad situation worse, particularly for those minority children who desperately need better schools. High-level representatives of the school system should meet as soon as possible with Federal officials, Much can be done to make the system more even-handed, but not necessarily along the lines suggested in the Federal report. The sensible course is to negotiate in good faith, with only one aim-to make the future better than the past.

ate a police force that turns law enforcement on and off like a faucet, to further its own interests by either rewarding or punishing the public or City Hall. An illegally parked car should invariably be ticketed not because of a temporary punitive "blitz" nor because the city wants the revenue, but because it is a violation of the law. The real problem has always been not that too many cars are ticketed but that too many violations are ignored.

A police force that makes a plaything of law enforcement jeopardizes respect for the law-and for the police. Whether the administration of the parking regulations is subjected to periodic ticketing "quotas" issued by higher police authority or to the whims and bargaining pressures of the police union, the immediate effect is to create confusion; the end result is contempt for all law enforcement.

The Northeast Organizes

Buoyed by hopes of a more sympathetic Administration in Washington, the governors of seven-and possibly more-Northeastern atatea will meet in Saratoga Springs this weekend with representatives of industry, labor and education to develop plans for obtaining more Federal assistance for regional redevelopment.

The governors bave an impressive case for coosideration in Washington, Consider these facts: in the past quarter century, the region has had the slowest population growth, the lowest per capita income increase and the highest unemployment in the nation. During the past year, according to a recent report from the Bureau of Labor Statistics, employment grew less than one-tenth of 1 percent in the Northeast, while it increased 2 percent in the North Central' states, 2.3 percent in the South and 2.5 percent in the West.

Although the seven original members of the recently formed Coalition of Northeastern Governors-New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Vermont-contain 22.3 percent of the national population and account for 24.3 percent of the nation's personal income, they carry more than 25 percent of the Federal tax burden. In return for this substantial contribution to the national treasury, the coalition states receive only 14.5 percent of Federal airport allocations, 18 percent of national defense outlays, 20 percent of Federal commerce and transportation spending, 15 percent each of Economic Development grants and Highway Trust funds and 18 percent of Commodity Credit Corporation payments.

Science: 'Our Leadership Is in Danger'

To the Editor:

The recent sweep of the 1976 Nobel Prizes by U.S. scientists is a tribute both to the outstanding scientific cootributions made by these individuals and to the system of science that has evolved in this country since the Second World War. Yet, while basking in the glow cast by these Nobel laureates, we must oot lose sight of the fact that our world leadership in science and technology is in danger-as your editorial "Nobel Sweep" (Oct. 20) pointed out. The universities have been the keystone of basic research in the American system of science, but their ability to maintaio a strong program of basic research is being undermined. Several factors contribute to this alarming situation. Among the most serious are (1) the sharp decline in Federal support for university-based research over the past decade and (2) a projected downward trend in college enrollments during the 1980'a dua to a decrease in the college-age population. These factors have led to fewer academic jobs and, in turn, to an increasingly older faculty. Since most of the professors in this older group are still far from retirement, there will be limited opportunity for young scientists. Yet these are the people who must pick up the torch if we are to maiotain a viable research capability in our universities. They are the Nobel laureates of the future.

The loog-range implications of these trends are serious, but there are some bopeful aigns. The National Science Foundation, the chief Federal supporter of basic research in universities, has had a major increase io its 1977 budget. The recent re-establishment of the Office of Science and Technology Policy in the White House - with bipartisan support - indicates that there will be more thought given by Science in this country is still strong, but it will be endangered unless we attend to the problems faced by our universities and insure adequate support for basic research. Parking Ticket Politics

The laws and regulations governing parking are not at all mysterious. The city abounds with signs which explain where parking is or is not permitted. Fire hydrants are off-limits. Double-parking is illegal. New Yorkers should be entitled to assume that enforcement of these rules is considered by the police as a matter of routine, not of whim. And there can be no question that the parking and other traffic laws require a rigorous enforcement that they seldom receive.

Now the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association in its war of nervea against the city has alternately threatened a so-called ticket "blitz" and total indulgence of parking violations. The first tactic is intended to punisb the citizenry; the second aims at depriving the city of its income from fines.

Neither course is acceptable. No community can toler-

To correct this imbalance will require a sustained. and closely coordinated effort. The formation of the governors coalition, In which Governor Carey has played a leading role, and of a parallel grouping of Northeastern. members of Congress represent a promising beginning. But concrete problems remain to be addressed if the region is to speak with a voice that commands respect in Washingtoo.

One of these is the partisan nature of the gubernatorial alliance-all seven of whom are Democrats. Every effort should be made to include Republican Governor Thompson of New Hampshire and Independent Governor Longley of Maine-both of whom have been invited to the Saratoga Springs conference-and to retain Vermont, which has a Republican governor-elect. Even though Democrats will soon control the White House as well as both houses of Congress, the Northeast will need all the support it can muster to carry its weight in Washington in competition with other regions.

There is also weakness in the failure of the region so far seriously to address problems of mutual self-help -with the notable exception of initial studies of a proposal by Felix Rohatyn for the formation of a Regional Energy Development Corporation. To make a convincing case for Federal aid on a regional basis, the Northeastern states must begin to demonstrate their ability to work together to eliminate iotraregional rivalries for industry and jobs, to coordinate planning in such areas as transportation, energy and industrial development, and to achieve common policies on such critical issues as the development of offshore oil reaources with adequate environmental safeguarda.

The meeting of the governors and other participants from the region in Saratoga Springs could be a first step to a Northeast that is united-not only in its demand for a fairer chare of the Federal pie but in its determination to cooperate for mutual self-help.

Iceberg Shortage Ahead?

Mention icebergs and most people's minds immediately turn to thoughts of danger, to recollections of the Titanic sinking beneath the sea with terrible loss of life. after crashing ioto one of those huge, frozen maases in the North Atlantic. Such images begin in elementary school when children learn about the patrols that chart the number and paths of floating icebergs to warn ships and . prevent repetition of a Titanic disaster.

But in a world where population, living standards and raw material needs are rising, the pressure on resources grows iocessantly. Yesterday's useless or even harmful substance becomes today's --- or tomorrow's --essential source of human requirements.

So it is now with icebergs, which are being eyed more and more as a relativaly cheap source of water for desert and semi-desert areas. Several years ago, Dr. John Isaacs of the Scripps Iostitute of Oceanography suggested towing icebergs to Southern California from Antarctica and using the melted water from this source to supply the rapidly rising needs of Los Angeles, San Diego and neighboring communities.

Now Saudi Arabia has commissioned a atudy to investigate the practicality of towing $5-million-ton Antarctic icebergs 5,000 miles to the vicinity of the Saudi port of Jidda where the ice would be melted for drinking water and for irrigation. The price of a glass of iceberg water in Jidda, it is estimated, would be half the cost of a glass of water obtained by desalting seawater. Off the coast of St. John's, Newfoundland, icebergs are being studied and moved for a completely different reason: to free seabed areas so that drilling can be done for the oil and gas believed to lie under the icebergs.

No doubt the first icebergs to be moved long distances in order to water the deserts and to nourisb the bumans living there will be considered exotic, even bizarre, experiments. But if these experiments succeed, it will soon be realized that vast quantities of valuable water are frozen in the icebergs and major ecocomic and legal questions will quickly arise. Who owns the icebergs floating in the Arctic and the Antarctic? How much should their owners, if any, be paid per million tons of ice? And sooner or later some imaginative economist will publisb a projection forecasting an iceberg shortage by the year 2050 or 2075, the signal perhaps for the oations owning iceberga to get together in a cartel to impose the highest possible iceberg price they can extort from the rest of the world.

To anyone who thinks these prospects are fantastic, we suggest casting the mind back a few years to the days when everyone assumed that there were an infinite number of fish in the sea, and a shortage of fish seemed as unlikely then as a shortage of icebergs does now.

Transkei: United Nations vs. the Xhosa

To the Editor:

The recent resolution in the U.N. condemning the independence of Transkei, voted on favorably 135 to 0 with only the United States abstaining, is yet another case of political shortsightedness and, worse, pandering by the more responsible elements of this body to those whose motives are often open to speculation.

The only justification put forward by the members of the U.N. for their retributive action is that a recognition of Transkei as independent would amount to approval of Sonth Africa's ioternal policies. The world seems to have forgotten one thing: nationalism. Long and voluble have been the criticisms against separate development and the so-called "evils" perpetuated by this system. Yet it seems as if the U.N. would willingly push the Xhosa back into the arms they abhor.

Although the South African Government envisions eventual independence for its nine tribal homelands and follows a policy it feels is best suited 10 achieve this end, the decision to accept independence rests with the African tribes themselves. Some, such as Chief Gatsha Buthelezi of Kwa-Zala, have refused to entertain the notion. This is the situation that invites concern and criticism from the world. Those are the Africans who merit re-evaluatinn by South Africans and non-South Africans alike. Ignoring a positive outgrowth of the difficult racial situation

Who's In Charge Here?

By William Safire

HPY init A

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10-One of the great George Price cartooos of a generation ago pictured a hapless zookeeper inside a monkey cage trying to get his hat back from the monkeys, who were gaily tossing it around, as an irate lady visitor outside tapped her umbrella on the ground and demanded, "Who's in charge here?"

That is the question Jimmy Carter will have to answer as he turns his attention to the U.S. Department of State, Either he will put his own people in at most of the top positions, or he will leave the bureaucracy untouched. in charge of a professional union called the American Foreign Service Association.

Right now there can be no doubt that the union wants to run the shop. Of Henry Kissinger's ten Assistant Secretaries, only one is "noncareer." This unprecedented abdicatioo of management to a union enabled the Secretary to buy internal support for policies and practices which have recently been rejected by the voters. It is as if a Secretary of Defense, to butter up the Joint Chiefs, were to appoint nine professional military men to be Assistant Secretaries of Defense.

Not content with taking over the daily operations of Foggy Bottom from non-Establishment Presidential appointees, the Foreign Service is set to present the President-elect with a demand that he appoint nine out of ten ambassadors from the union ranks.

That call by the diplocrats for a 10 percent quota ceiling on "outsiders" will be made in the December issue of the Foreign Service Journal, which quotes with approval the contempt for noncareerists as ambassadors expressed in 1939 by British diplomat Harold Nicolson: ". . . the amateur diplomatist is apt out of vanity and owing to the shortness of his tenure to seek for rapid successes . . . he is inclined to be far too zealous and to have bright ideas . . . he has not acquired the humane and tolerant disbelief which is the product of a long diplomatic career and is often assailed by convictions, sympathies, even impulses . . , he may arrive with a righteous contempt for the formalities...."

This professional snobbery will sooo be buttressed by editorial denunciations of the "spoils system" that enables "backs" and "wealthy amateurs" to grab foreign posts that rightfully belong to a well-trained elite of careerists. After exceptions are allowed for amateurs like David Bruce, Ellsworth Bunker, Averell Harriman and Benjamin Franklin, the Foreign Service lobby will assail the "sale of embassadorships" and thus seek to coerce the new President into going for their ouota.

It is as unjust to condemn noncareer ambassadors as a bunch of bumbling dilettentes as it is to suggest-as one retiring diplomat privately and slanderously does-that F.S.O.'s owe their allegiaoce first to the Foreign Service, then to the State Department, and then to the Uoited States."

Surely there are fatcats who want cushy posts abroad and can't be bothered to learn a language, or to pronounce a foreign leader's name. They should not be appointed ambassadors anywhere.

And certainly there are Foreign Service officers who will only send back what their superiors want to hear, who treat with disdain the "domestic politics" that make this nation what it is, or who will identify with the country they are in so as to be more accepted (t, t)locally with less personal friction. They 1.11.4 should not be appointed either. Alerea de Carales de C

We need a mix: citizen-ambassadors like Pat Moynihan at the United Nations and Laurence Silberman in Yugoslavia, who have infuriated the Foreign Service establishment in strongly asserting the U.S. national interest, as well as F.S.O.-ambassadors like 12 Richard Sneider in Korea, Frank Carlucci in Portugal and Robert McCloskey in the Netherlands, who set high standards as experienced diplomats.

We also need a fair shake within that mix: no more "rich noncareerist-only" plums, and no more "brave-careeristonly" posts of danger or bardship. At present, slightly over two-thirds of our ambassadors are Foreign Service officers, Of Richard Nixon's appoint-2122ments, 68 pcrcent were careerists: of John Kennedy's appointments, only 58 percent were careerists. f think Kennedy was right, but on balance, today's $2^{-1} \leq 2^{-1}$ 2-to-I split offers a good mix. An ominous impression is gaining currency, that there exists a sinister relationship between Israel and South Africa. This charge is being disseminated by forces in the third world, egged on by the Soviet Union. It focuses on Israel's trade and arms sales to South Africa, as evidenced by the controversial resolution adopted by the General Assembly on Tuesday that condemned Israel.

It may be deplorable to have commercial dealings with South Africa and it is surely morally intolerable to engage in arms traffic with the apartheid regime. But to single out Israel as the main culprit bespeaks rank cynicism, rampant hypocrisy and anti-Semitic prejudice.

For the truth is-and it can be documented despite determined, systematic efforts by governments to suppress it-that scores of countries trade with South Africa, including 19 black African states; the economic worth of the Africans' dealings, amounting to many bundreds of millions of dollars annually, far outweighs Israel's. The 19 are Angola, Botswana, Central African Republic, Chad, Congo. Gabon, Ghana, Ivory Coast, Lesotho, Liberia, Malagasy Republic, Malawi, Mauritius, Mozambique, Nīgeria, Senegal, Swaziland, Zaire, Zambia,

Their economic dealings with South Africa are flourishing and growing: large-scale imports and exports of raw materials, building equipment, pharmacenticals and foods; airline passenger and freight connections; railway projects; shipping lines; construction of office buildings, hotels and housing; tourism; technical aid in disease control; constructioo, engineering and metallurgical equipment for copper and diamond mines; financial investments, development loans and longterm credit arrangements.

Mozambique is the most striking instance of this symbiotic relationship. Despite the militantly anti-apartheid, anti-Western, Marxist ideology of this newly independent country, its economic relations with Pretoria are varied and thriving. South Africa is its second-biggest customer and the largest source (nearly ooe-half) of its total foreign-exchange earnings.

The most astounding aspect, economically and morally, of black Africa's relations with South Africa concerns the blacks who work in South African gold, diamond, platinum, uranium and coal mines.

Hundreds of thousands of migrant laborers from neighboring countries-Botswana, Lesotho, Swaziland, Mozambique, Malawi, Angola and otherswork under arrangements that can only be described as sweetheart cootracts between the black governments and South African companies ...

The nearly 180,000 Mozambican to their Government, in gold bullion. Only when the miners go home after contracts have expired does their Government pay them the rest of their wages, but only in local currency, while the state keeps the gold. This deal gives Mozambique a profit of over 200 percent on the sweat of its citizens: a subsidy to the black Merxist slate for supplying indentured servants to the white apartheid state.

Israel's dealings with South Africa are outweighed by black Africa's. But it is wrong for Israel, why not for black Africa? And if it is right for black Africa, why not for Israel?

Such are the ironies of the double standard that it will surprise no ooe. to learn that such principled Arab friends of African liberation as Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Jordan, Egypt, Dubai and Abu Dhabi traffic with South Africa in oil, tourism, foods, and even arms. Nor are those progressive champions of human rights, the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, averse to dirtying their hands in South Africa trade. A recent International Monetary Fund study shows that in 1974 South Africa exported goods worth some $5 million to the Soviet bloc, and imported nearly $25 million worth from it. The same report shows that South Africa has trade relations, amounting to millions of dollars, with four members of the United Nations Special Committee Against Apartheid (which recently issued a report condemning Israel for its relations with South Africa): East Germany, Haiti, Hungary, Peru-two rightist dictatorships and two Communist regimes, united in cant and opportunism. As for Israel's small arms trade (six patrol boats and a missile system for them)-which I do not condone-it is dwarfed into insignificance by the South African arms traffic of other countries. France above all, but also Britain, the United States, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, Switzerland, Canada, Jordan, the Soviet Union and Czechosiovakia have been involved -over many years in the sale, licensing or coostruction of a vast array of military-related equipment amounting to many billions of dollars.

Who are Israel's accusers? India, a leading member of the United Nations Apartheid Committee, is typical. It brazenly poiots the finger at Israel while it secretly makes atom bombs out of nuclear materials furnished for peaceful uses, destroys its people's civil liberties, and practices its own version of apartheid in the treatment of its 50 million wretched untouchables.

What price hypocrisy? Nothing less than peace and justice.

National Paralysis on Energy

Three years after a third and highly successful oil embargo the United States continues to behave as if future supplies of oil were assured for decades. Almost every relevant segment of society has reached high levels of effectiveness in stalling or stopping development of new energy sources. Public interest groups, environmentalists, the courts, Congress, some of the Administration. and even the oil companies are diligent in finding and expounding reasons for inaction.

The public shuns the small automobiles, and its consumption of both gasoline and electricity is at record levels. Domestic production of oil is down 12 percent from 1973 and now meets less than 60 percent of consumption. Production and reserves of natural gas have decreased steadily. During the past 3 years the United States has become much more dependent on the abundant reserves of the Arabian peninsula. This dependence will increase greatly during the next decade: reserves elsewhere are limited and production from them will be leveling or declining.

Fart of the difficulty in gearing up to meet future energy needs is that few people seem to grasp the magnitude of the problem. The domestic oil and gas that we are now enjoying were discovered and developed relatively inexpensively and they have been produced with only localized environmental impact. Unless our people are prepared to pay a much higher price for energy in monetary terms and to some extent in environmental factors. they must be prepared to face a drastic change in their standards of living.

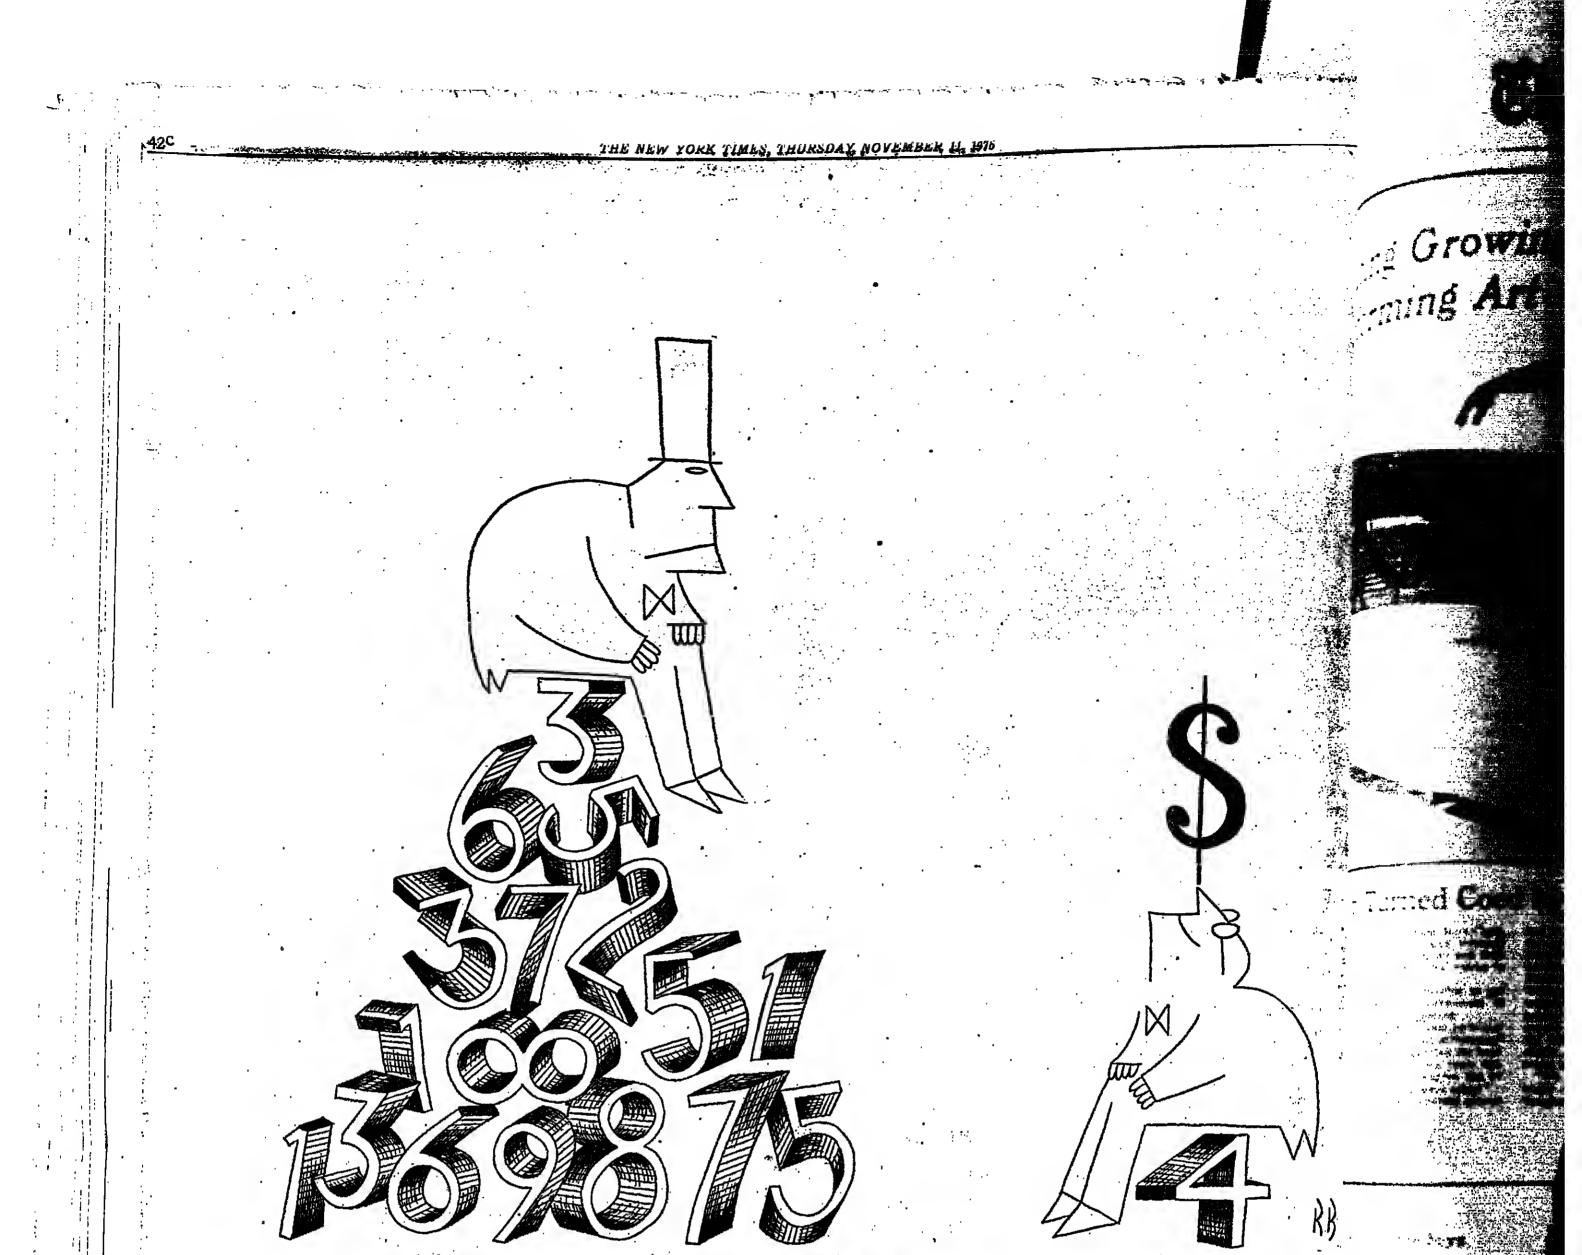

Those who campaign for strong negative positions toward various energy sources rarely seem to consider the total problem. They seldom devote comparable positive effort to conservation or to the development of alternative energy sources. The net result of their activity is almost totally negative.

The situation is exemplified by a recent incident related to me by a friend. He was approached at his home by a young man seeking signatures to a petition aimed at nuclear power plants. My friend queried the petitioner about the use of other fuels. Both agreed as to the necessity of reducing imports of oil. The young man, when questioned about coal, denounced pollution arising from burning it. My friend then asked, "If we stop nuclear power, where will we get our electricity?" The reply was, "Oh, they'll take care of that." Thereupon the young man took his petition elsewhere.

Presumably the "they" that the young man was refer-. water. ring to was the federal government. But the power of the 1011 government, while great in some directions, is limited in • • others. It can snother the country in red tape. It can levy 1.0 taxes. It can have at its disposal as much money as it wants 417.76 merely by running the printing presses. But Congress tin saide itself cannot produce one gallon of gasoline. While Con-10.2822 gress could in principle provide the funds or guarantees (1,1)necessary to get a program on synthetic fuel rolling, it has refused to do so. Instead, we face an absurd situation in さえること which 35 committees and subcommittees maneuver for a 107254 piece of the energy action, often making conflicting deci-3.5 sions. The Administration is not much better. Half a 1. . . . dozen agencies impinge, usually negatively, on the Energy Research and Development Administration.

The oil companies are beset with threats of divestiture. This, added to environmental problems and the near certainty of financial loss, has virtually killed the shale oil program. Liquids from coal are far distant, will be very costly, and are not readily compatible with existing refineries and distribution systems. On 1.1 the other hand, the oil companies can make a profit with--11 K out enormous capital investments merely by using exist-ing facilities to process domestic and imported oil. 10,06,00 Under the present circomstances they have little 20 mil 1 10.015 incentive to take initiative. 1994 During the past 3 years we have experienced the

When John Curry first approached Twyla Tharp about breaking the ice with him, it was almost worse than preparing for an Olympic final.

was a hit oervous about working with her," the world and Olympic figure-skating champion said yesterday, re-calling his meeting with the queen of choreography. "I was afraid I wouldn't be able to do the routines well enough." Miss Tharp, who has hlazed revolutionary trails in hallet and modern dance, bad never been on a pair of skates. "I was able to ask, 'Can you?'" she said, dramatizing their earliest discussions. "He said, 'Here's how.'"

While 140 skaters from 6 to 11 years old were gliding across the ice yesterday atternoon at a rink in Westwood, N.J., Mr. Curry and Miss Tharp were putting the polish on his routine at Madison Square Garden.

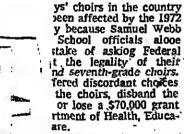

Figure skating finally has come of age in the United States. And with more skaters, rinks and clubs catering to the ambitious demands of recreatioo-minded Americans, the time may be right for something dramatic in the sport, such as carrying it one step beyond, into the realm of performing art. New York City's share of the statewide vote was only 32.6 percent last Tues-day, compared with 42.4 percent in 1960. The drop also exceeds the declice in the city's share of the population, now estimated at 41.6 percect com-pared with 46.1 percent in 1960. In contrast, the suburban counties of Nas-seu Suffolk Wastchester and Bocksau, Suffolk, Westchester and Rock-land, with only 20.5 percent of the state's population, provided 23.2 per-cent of the vote. Business/Finance American Motors continued its sales shump, reporting a record loss of $51.1 million for the three months ended Sept. 30. The picture is grim for the country's smallest car maker because its Big Three rivals bave been accumulating record profits this year. [61:5-6.]

Domestic copper prices, which many last summer were expecting to rise, have gone down instead this fall and remain around the 70-cent level. Today almost no one foresees any increase in the coming months, and there has been a major decrease in demand. [61:2-4.]

Stock prices tumhled agaio in midafternoon, with the Dow industrial average closing at 924.04, down 6.73 for the day. [61:2.] A heavy volume of new issues came to market as interest rates on state and city bonds rose. [62:5-6.] Soybean futures again led farm com-modities upward with a gain of more than 10 cents a hushel. [62:4.]

Always addressed as Madame, she hecame famous as the teacher of several young pianise tional cootests. Last March, at a celebration of her 96th birth-day, ahe was made honorary chairman of the Juilliard plann faculty.

Emphasized Tone and Line

Russian-born and trained, Mme. Lhevinne was an exponent of the late 19th-century school of Slavic pianism. As a child, she had heard Anton Rhinstein play, and she came to this country with a generation of eminent Russian pianists -her husband, Ossip Gahrilowitsch, Leo-pold Godowsky, Joaef Hofmann, Sergei Rachmaninoff and Alexander Siloti. As a teather, she tried to foster the best as-peois of their hrand of piano playing, with its emphasis on a singing tone, the musical line, persocality withoot eccen-tricity and the appearance of sponta-neity without capriciousness.

Russian accent, and she could be extremely authoritative when she wanted to be. She did not try to impose her own musical ideas on those she taught, only to help them realize their best quali-ties. "She does not make the student over in her own image," John Browning said a few years ago. "She has the wonderful quality of leaving the per-sonality of the student intact."

She was well-known for the interest she took in her pupils' private lives. She sent them to museums and libraries to widen their cultural knowledge, aod she In: 1970, when she was 90, she had 25 to her hany structures not to at her con-studeots coming regularly to her apart-her her her her best well." She was born oo March 29, 1880, in Kiev, hut she grew up in Moscow. Her father, Jacques Bessie, was a Dutch husiencouraged her to take piano lessons, which she began at the age of 7.

'No Love at First Sight'

At the Imperial Conservatory in Moscow, she studied with Vassily Safonov, one of whose pupils was Josef Lhevinne. The latter became Rosina's temporary teacher once when Safonov was away. It was "no love at first sight," she later recalled, but love did develop and they were married shortly after her gradua-tion, when she was 18.

Although they gave a concrt together in Tiflis (now Tblisi) the following year, Mme. Lhevinne decided to give up a pub-lic career in favor of her husband'a. "I've never regretted it," she once said. "His hards that was the my

Of her per-formances of Chopin's E minor Piano Concerto in 1963 with the New York Philharmonic, Harold C. Schonberg wrote in The New York Times: "She produced a warm and vital sound, one that had no, trouble carrying anywhere in the house... Technically she was a mar-vel,... One could mention many other things. a perfect legato, a spacious and unharried view of the music and a deli-cate sense of poetry."

As small woman, Mme. Lhevinne was often referred to by her pupils as the "tiny empress." She had never lost her "tiny empress." She had never lost her mous as duo-planists, but she refused to appear as a soloist again until she was 75. They both joined Juillard's faculty in 1924. She was considered the hetter teacher, because she had the patlence to deal with pupils that her husband did not.

Celebrated as an Inspiration

Learning of her death, Peter Mennio, president of Juilliard, said: "She was quite simply one of the greatest teachers of this century. With her passing, a whole con-cept of teaching and performing goes with her. At the opening of Juilliard at Lincoln Center in 1969, she was the first member of the faculty to ack for a key widen their cultural knowledge, aod she constantly urged them "to love people." "You play what you are," she told them. She slyly hecame involved with their love lifes, about which she said, "I live so many romances that I feel I am 18 again." Corning Galloping Into Museum of West

By JUDITH CUMMINGS Special to The New York Thines

CORNING, N.Y., Nov. 10-Before Hollywood laid claim to it, the picture of the American West was conveyed to the rest of the country mostly by Eastern artists, such as Frederic Remingtoo, who journeyed out to capture . images that showed up in stereopticons and on the pages of Harper's Weekly.

Part of the legacy is being installed in this glass-company town, in the new-Rockwell-Corning Museum, featuring a collection of Western art ranging from cowboy bravado to poignant portraits of the waning days of the American Indian.

Robert E. Rockwell, who made the museum possible, is the former owner of the local department store, and up until now he has kept much of the collection of Remingtons and Charles M. Russells and others of the Western school crammed right in the storeon walls, in corners and atop cabinets in the lingerie section. Mr. Rockwell gave the collection to the town because, as he says, "right oow, if you want to see a collection of great Western art, the nearest place is Tulsa, Oklahoma," and because he thinks "if kids can see it, they'll love it," as he did in bis boyhood on a Colorado cattle ranch. The museum will be opened to the public Saturday on a floor of the newly renovated Baron Steuben Hotel. The Corning Glass Works, enjoying a boom year after several years of slump, is underwriting the project and has pledged also to remodel the abandoned Victorian city hall as a permaneot site for the museum, at a cost of about $2.5 million.

'Now, We've Got Hope'

Many here take the museum's open-ing as a sign of a budding revitalization of Coroing, a town of 17,000 that depends on the glass company the way Hershey, Pa., depends oo chocolate. "If anything should happen to that glassworks, Lord help us," said Leooard Sparling, who bas lived here 52 years and drives a Cadillac taxi up and down the highway between here and Elmira. "It's the only industry we got around here. Now, anyway, we've got

A year ago, Corning laid off 500 workers in a major retrenchment. This year, it is reporting the highest sales in its history, allowing it, in the words of George Southworth, head of the company's historic preservation projects, "to take up Bob Rockwell's offer to give us his collection if we'd give him a museum to keep it in."

The entire Rockwell collection includes a 3,000-piece collection of Carder Steuben glass, antique toys and such Western items as firearms and Indian artifacts. These are eventually to go into the larger quarters at the old cityhall.

In the meantime, visitors to the Western collection are met as they enter what used to be the hotel lobby by a blow-op of Edward Borein's "The Calgary Stampede," which resembles pandemonlum on horseback and hides a movie projector sbooting a cootinu-ous stream of Wild West films to the opposite wall.

"I paid $500 1S years ago for a signed Frederic Remingtoo that turned out to be a fake, but I still keep it in my office because if I hadn't hought it 1 probably never would have started." the white-haired Mr. Rockwell said of the origins of his collection.

He had sent a photograph of the paioting to Dr. Panl McCracken, then the director of the Whitney Museum of Western Art at Cody, Wyo. Mr. McCracken broke the bad news, Mr. Rockwell said, but he also "met me in New York to introduce me to the reputable galleries that sold Western art." Mr. Rockwell bought four at once. including Remington's bronze sculpture "The Mountain Man," and has not stopped since. Rockwell's on Market Street, the department store Mr. Rockwell recently sold, is a tourist attraction, along with Corning's other museum, the Coroing Glass Center. "People tell me they don't believe it, ti see a $100,000 Russell hanging over the brassiere department," Mr. Rock-well said with a smile. "That's to make it kind of unique."

Another Male Bastion Falls: '21' Hires a Waitress

The "21" Club, repository of the old speakeasy tradition and bastion of boardroom macbo, has bowed to legal pressure and hired its first waitress.

Jeanne Kiog. 30 years old, a col-lege graduate aod a professional waitress for a dozen years, now is working part-time as an apprentice at "21." She is to begin waiting on tables two weeks from now. The "21" Club is the first of eight restaurants to reach a settlement after having been sued last year over alleged discrimination against women. The suit against the other restaurants, a class action initiated by the Amer-ican Civil Liberies Uoion, is still pending. Among those named in the com-plaint are Lutèce, La Côte Basque, the Four Seasons and La Caravelle.

As a result of the out-of-court set-tlement, "21" will hire Miss King and pay undisclosed fees to her as well as to the A.C.L.U. for legal fees.

Affirmative Action Promised

In addition, the restaurant has agreed to "engage in affirmative ef-fort" to hire additional women as waiters and busboys, with the eventual goal being that women will comprise 50 percent of the dining-room staff. The restaurant also agreed to train women to become dining-room captains and to hire them in those positions when they become qual-

"We have agreed to settle," said Sheldon Tannen, an executive of '21.'

"We recognize that there should be equal opportunity for men and women. Just because we've been following a tradition in our business doesn't mean we've been right." Mr. Tannen said "21" had traditionally bired European-trained people for its dining room staff because they considered service a profession -"a profession undertaken with ping stone to something else. "We just don't want someone who takes a job as a waitress while she's waiting to become an actress," he said. At the Four Seasons, Paul Kovi, co-owner, said: "We have hired one waitress and one page, and we are looking for more. I think that the ladies-don't realize that the jobs are there and they don't come around. We have never discriminated. If you tell me that there is a woman who, as maître d', will increase my busi-ness, 1 will hire her."

Mr. Kovi said the woman now working as a waitress "trained for two weeks and now is like all the others.

"Being a woman, I wouldn't dis-criminate," said Dawn Lowis, manager of Charley O's, another of the restaurants named in the complaint. "If they were turned down, it was probably because we didn't oeed

U.S. Commission Investigating

Miss Lowis said that two women had recently been hired as waitresses and that more would be hired. "We have women in food control, doing the menu, checking food," she said. "We have had women chefs. It's crazy to say we discriminate." The A.C.L.U. filed the complaint on behalf of Miss King and Cathryn Smith, another professional waitress. The restaurants named were all alleged to have rejected them for service jobs only because they were women.

The complaint filed by the A.C.L.U. is currently before the United States Equal Employment Opportunity Com-mission. A spokesman said yesterday that it would be illegal to comment on any action before the commission. Vincent Sardi, the owner of Sardi's Restaurant, one of those named in the A.C.L.U. action, said when the original complaint was filed in May 1975 that women might find working io Sardi's difficult because there were no restroom and locker facilities and because the waiters might object to women cutting into their jobs."

Yesterday, he said he had four waitresses at lunch time and two who worked both lunch and dinner. "Women coming in was a yery good thing," he said. "They're a catalyst. They've got the men working harder to compete.

2. Mr. Sardi said he had had about 40 women trying for jobs but that most of them could not qualify. They think of it in terms of a cocktail lounge," he said.

Union Also Named

Also named in the A.C.L.U. com-plaint was Local 1 of the Hotel and Resizurant Workers Union. Jordan Pola, secretary-treasurer of the local, said vestarday that the total for the local, said yesterday that the union had no control over restaurant hiring. They must try the New York State Employment Service when they want to hire someone," Mr. Pola said. "If they can't find anyone who meets their requirements there, they can hire wherever they want. Our con-tract says only that the new em-ployee must join the union in 30 days."

Spokesmen for Lutèce, La Caravelle, La Côte Basque and Le Manoir, all mentioned in the complaint, declined to comment. Bob Willis, the general manager of Maxwell's Plum, said: "We don't discriminate. We have women working as waitresses now

Kathleen Peratis, a lawyer for the A.C.L.U. who filed the original charges of discrimination, praised "21" for agreeing to hire Miss King. Of the remaining restaurants, she said:

"They're just being stupid. But they're beginning to realize they'd better settle because they're damn well going to lose."

But in his appearance before the sub-committee, Mr. Carbo gave the same an-swer to more than 25 questions. Reading hoarsely from a slip of paper, he said

One prominent banker said shat the Bellevue's location, at South Broad and Walnut Streets, was "not ideal" for what would be the city's largest hotel. "It's a nice community party," Mrs. Buckley said, without even sticking tongue in cheek.

Most of the other tongues around were busy explaining that the city wasn't paying a cent for the party (it was belog given by Mr. Stigwood) and lapplog up the beef Wellington, hot smoked salmon, pate and lobster mousse on the buffet tables.

The latter sight was watched with considerable joy by Peter Aschkenasy, who owns the United States Steakhouse and Charley O's and who catered the lunch. His chef, carrying all the food, had beeo arrested oo the way to Gracie Mansion, for driving without a license. The food had arrived scarcely 30 minutes before the guests.

By midafternoon, when the party broke up, all the "Gracie Mansion" matches had disappeared, as had the green-and-white clad schoolgirls from the Police Athletic League Drum and Bugle Corp of the 120th Precinct in Staten Island. But Joanne Newcomb and Nancy Kim, 14-year-old schoolgirls from Queens, were still out in the driveway "freezing tn death." They had been standing around since 9 A.M., had seen the Bea Gees on their way in, but were hoping for another glimpse. "Weil anyway, Barry shaked my hand," Nancy said. "My God!"

ed on Seventh Avenue this week. Many of them are commercial, which in current fashion parlance means they are familiar enough to be easily understandable and flattering enough to most bodies so that women will buy them. Some of them are pretty. Few have style.

Style? Like elegance, it's a word that through infrequency of use has almost lost its meaning.

To work out a current definition, watch for Geoffrey Beene's clothes -they're full of style, whether they're fishnet tops over shorts or fluid, pale silk crepe dresses with a line of color drawn down the front or maybe across the shoulders. What is astonishing about this is that it's accomplished in a thoroughly modern idiom. Style is, after all, a rather old-fashioned virtue. The 1930's were replete with it. It foundered, understandably, in the 1940's, surfaced in the next decade, and disappeared, it would seem forever, in the 1960's.

Fishnet Tops

Well, Mr. Beene has brought it back into fashion, as he demonstrated in his show yesterday-adapting it to the vicissitudes of modern living. What's more, he's made it un-pretentious. This is no time for clothes that demand attention, for clothes that overwhelm the weareras well as, you might say, the viewer. Those fishnet tops, for example, look as if they were made of burlap. They're nnt. They're a very fine quality, soft Italian cotton. Unassuming, of course, but very chic. The evening dresses in crepe de chine are another example. A lot of

Idaho's Governor Juggles a Hot Potato-Coolly

There's the Children's Aid Society. And the A.S.P.C.A. And NOW. They protect children, animals and women against their abusers and detractors.

Cecil D. Andres protects potatoes. "I'm here to sell spuds," he said yesterday at the Pierre Hotel. "There isn't any doubt about it." Mr. Andrus thinks potatoes are ma-ligned. People associate them with fat and ban them from diets. "They say it's starchy," he said of the potato, "and if you're on a diet stay away from it."

Gov. Cecil D. Andrus of Idaho and Eugene Frankowski, utive chef at the Pierre, check over some Idahos.

cal Idaho baking potato, tipping the scales at S to 10 ounces, he maintained, has only 120 calories and is rich in protein.

Where people npset things, he points out, is with the butter dish and the sour cream container. Mr. Andrus says a good baked potain with only sait and pepper is a filling meal.

Sustained Life As for those who fuss about the carbobydrate content, Mr. Andrus says he isn't about to engage in debate all the way down the nutritional line. There are people in the third world, he says, who have sustained life for extended periods on potatoes alone.

Who is Mr. Andrus? He's the Governor of Idaho, a state with an eight-billinn-pound potato crop this year, up 10 percent from last. It's worth $550 million doilars or one third of the stale's gross agricultural product.

LONDON, Nov. 9 (Reuters) - Umberto Berlen, a 39-year-old waiter, complained today that he was dismissed from his job at a London nightclub because he served wine over a diner's left shoulder instead of his right.

Mr. Berlen said that another reason for being asked to leave his job at Les Amoassadeurs Club, whose members include Prince Charles, was occause he smelled of garlic. "I had caten some garlic, it is true, the night before, but it was to helo cure a bad cold I had." he told reporters.

Mr. Berlen also acknowledged that he had served the wine, a magnum o.' red bordeaux, from the wrong side. "But there was no room to go round the table because there was a column in the way." he said.

The club's secretary, Robert Mills, commented: "I will not have anybody who lowers the standard of my club, which we have worked for years to put at the top."

Mr. Berlen said that he had applied to an industrial court to get his job back on the grounds of unfair dismissal.

Mr. Meany spoke warmly of John T. Dunlop as a possible Secretary of Labor in the new administration but insisted that there were others—whom he de-clined to identify—who would also be acceptable. Mr. Meany told the reporters that "the only commitment" made to him by Mr. Carter in their several face-to-face and telephone talks this year was that "any problems we have, he will give them im-mediate consideration."

Repeatedly, Mr. Meany deferred questions of policy and legislation until the Executive Council's regular February meeting in Miami Beach. Ionesco Tinges Despair With Humor

By JOHN L. HESS

Eugene Ionesco, the Academi-clan of the Absurd, arrived in town from Paris the other day to attend the American premiere of "La Vase" (Ooze), a film in which he makes his debut as a star, and to give his admirers and critics another dose of his own brand of humorous despair.

Six hundred admirers of the au-"The Bold Soprano" and "The Les-son" were assembled by the Mai-son Française at the Washington Square campus of New York University on Tuesday night for a panel interview. The playwright, a bald baritone in broadwaled brown corduroy, commanded the discussion in French and in an endless play of heavy-lidded grimaces, now resembling a malicious elf, now a Chinese sage.

Invention of Critics

The word avant-garde is not of annch use, be contended, since you cannot tell whether a movement is avant-garde until afterward. The phrase "Theater of the Absurd" was a critics' invention.

"The word that suits me is Theater of Derision. For me, it was an attempt to remove all meaning from every word, every gesture. The derision was real, the absurd was real, the meaninglessness was real. "All that is new doesn't have value, but to be new is a condition of value. . . [The artist] tries in a craftsmanlike fashion to explore the forest of the world. He must write as if he were alone in the world. He rejects everything. "If there is a contradiction in what I say, why not? After all, there are Hegelians of the Left, and Hegelians of the Right. It's a good thing that one contradicts oneself, else one would go mad." To the question, "Why write for tomorrow, when tomorrow lasts only 24 bours?" Mr. Ionesco an-swered, "Give me 24 hours to reply." Asked to discuss wby his earlier plays are still occasionally per-formed, while his recent ones, like "Macbett." a new version of Shakespeare's tragedy, have not been well received, he said: "I write rather to outrage the critics. If I bad continued to write The Bald Soprano' and 'The Lesson,' imagine what they would have written. I did not, and you can see what they did write."

Writes to Outrage the Critics

For an elderly artist, the playwright observed, it is a bit depress-ing to be praised for his early work. "This said, The Bald Sopra-no" may be my best work to date. "I live in a state of permanent depression." He squinted and smiled. Mr. Ionesco is not only the star of "La Vase," but also its anthor. The film, which was directed by Heinz Von Cramer, is to have only one showing here—Monday night at midnight at the Art Theater on Eighth Street east of Fifth Avenne. The film's French dialogue will be accompanied by a voice-over English translation. Mr. Ionesco will introduce the film and answer questions from the audience after the screening. Ad-mission is a contribution of $2: So far, there are no plans for further. showings, or for a commercial re-lease of "La Vase."

'Next Man' Plays on Paranoia By VINCENT CANEY

"The Next Man," which opened at the Rivoli and other theaters yesterday, is a suspense melodrama made by people whose tal-ent for filmmaking and knowledge of international affairs would both fit comfortably into the left nostril of a small bee.

It's about a visionary Saudi Arabian minister of state named Kahlil Abdul-Muhsen, played hy the very Scots-sounding Sean Connery, who proposes to defuse the Middle East by signing a mutu-al assistance pact with Israel and by making petroleum and petrole-um by-products available virtually at and to poor pations at cost to poor nations. "The Next Man" is the story of the attempt by various vested interests in this country, the Soviet Union and the Middle East, act-ing separately, to put an end to this dreadful scheme by putting an end to thali end to Khalii.

Like a lot of other films these days, "The Next Man" is obsessed with political assassinatioo but it never really identifies its villains, preferring, instead, to cop out by playing on natural paranoia that assumes that everyone everywhere is on the take from someone some-where. This attitude is too easy to repreent true cynicism. It's simple laziness.

In "The Next Man" the forces of reaction are represented entirely by a mysterious, exceedingly welldressed young woman named Ni-

The characters are always get-ting in and out of jets and coming upon colorful local festivals (including the Macy's Thanksgiving Day parade in New York), and if there's no parade to look at, the script will arbitrarily have someone decide to climb into a belicop-ter to go sight-seeing. "The Next Man" is the first film I've ever seen that is so acutely bored with itself that it tries to go away.

Who is responsible for mindless movie-making of this magnitude I've no idea, though it was pro-duced by Martin Bregman, who also shares credit for the film's "original story" with Alan Trust-man, who himself shares the screenplay credit with Mort Fine, David M. Wolf and Richard C.

Muti Leads the Philadelphians

By ALLEN HUGHES

Because Riccardo Muti bas been appointed principal guest conduc-tor of the Philadelphia Orchestra for next season and must therefore, be regarded as a leading can-didate to succeed Eugene Ormandy as its music director, the Italian maestro's appearance wth the or-cbestra at Carnegie Hall on Tuesday night was of more thao passing interest.

ic effect was really what he cared about most. In sbort, it was pre-cise, beautiful and not quite right. Berlioz's "Romeo and Juliet" music should have proven to be an ideal vehicle for him, but it fell' somewhat sbort of that. This, surely, is a young man's music, and Mr. Muti is, after all, only 35 years old. But it is also music of slight substance and sbaky struc-ture, and it demands a master jug-gler to keep it all whirling and

This character is played by Cornelia Sharpe, a new actress who is well on ber way to becoming the actress producers will hire when they can't get Faye Dun-away. Miss Sharpe is stunning looking and model-skinny, and you don't for a minute believe her to be an international assassin any more than you believe Mr. Connery to be an Arab anything. The movie appears to agree. As if to take our minds off such mat-ters, "The Next Man" moves rootlessly around the world like a fretful tourist, from New York to the Middle East, the south of France. London, Ireland, Bavaria, and the Bahamas, though nothing much happens in any one of these places that couldn't as easily happen somewhere else.

to indicate what qualities he might bring to the orchestra if he became music director? After hearing this program of surface. Stravinsky's "Norwegian Moods." Mozart's Symphony No. 25 in G minor and the Symphonic Excerpts from Berlioz's "Romeo and Juliet," the answer is "Not much of significance. Mr. Muti, who made his Americao debut with the Philadelphians in 1972, conducted them in three New York concerts before this one and was praised for his accomplishments each time.

There was much to admire on Tuesday night, too. He shaped the phrases of the Mozart symphony lovingly and allowed no note to be played meaninglessly. Furthermore, the tone was lovely throughout. But the interpretation was not consistent stylistically. At times, it seemed quite ISth-century in spirit, but then Mr. Muti would caress a phrase in such a way as to let you know that sitken symphon-

Mr. Muti is skillful, but he is not yet a magician able to mesmerize an audience with successions of effects that last as long as Berlioz's in this instance. And, indeed, when it came to the one surefire piece of the group, the "Queen Mab" Scherzo, Mr. Muti came close to seeming dull with it. No conductor should have to stand or fall on the basis of what he does with Berlioz's "Romeo and Juliet," however, nor upon his way with Stravinsky's charming but minor "Norwegian Moods." This listener would say of Mr. Muti that he seems to be a gifted young man who is still in the process of discovering and shaping his artistic personality. If this concert proved to be something less than satisfying, it was as much the resuit of poor judgment in programmaking as of anything else. Such things are not fatal.

Fine 'Major Barbara,' for the Love of Shaw

By CLIVE BARNES Sordal to The New York Times

PRINCETON, N.J.-Over the last few years the McCarter Theater, with its peculiarly symbiotic rela-tionship with Princeton University, has become one of the best resident theaters in the country. This has been due to men such as Lou Criss, Dan Seltzer and, nowadays, its cur-rent producing director, Michael Kahn. It not only offers a generally good repertory, but it also has an unusually bigh level of production values.

Take as a very good example the current staging of Shaw's "Major Barbara." Directed by Kenneth Frankel and with Maria Tucci as Barbara, William Swetland as her Machiavellian father and Robert Stattel as her Greek professor lover, this is just about as good a 'Major Barbara" as you could fairly expect anywhere.

By now I have a small and nig-gardly reputation as an anti-Shawian, which is unfair. I love Shaw-I simply do not love Shaw as much as his perfervid admirers love Shaw, and I also think he lacks true passion and would do almost anything for a laugh. Yet this, I submit, is putting Shaw in perspective, not at all dismissing him. A play such as 'Major Barbara," despite a certain dramatic lack of focus-there is no clearly marked protagonist-remains a diabolically ciever comedy.

People take Shaw so scriously that it is sometimes easy to forget how funny he can be. In part he is in the comic tradition of Ben Johnson, portraying his comic characters in the caricatured fashion of numors, and the construction of his plays is usually faultless. In "Major Barbara," Shaw, with his customary love of dialectic and paradox. is trying to pose problems of good and evil. He de-termines that, foreshadowing Brecht perhaps, "the greatest sin is poverty." Barbara is a rich Salvation Army lass intent on saving souls. Here father. Undershaft, is a munitions manufacturer intent on his own material good, and, so far as it affects him, the material good of his workers. He is an unre-pentant capitalist, while his daughter is an unthinking sentimentalist. The argument is not all that well balanced, yet it is entertaining

The Princeton production is very good indeed. First a word acout the accents-one would not know that this was not a purely English rather than American cast, I: never ceases to amaze me how well American actors assume English accents, whereas the number of British actors capable of a convincing American accent can practically be counted on the fingers of one thumb.

Mr. Frankel's staging proves ad-mirably direct. His groupings are simple, and, by and large, he very sensibly lets Shaw do the work ior him. For some reason he has transposed the play's date from 1906 to 1913-to suggest Britain on the eve of war perhaps-but even such a transposition does not quite justify a shawl-coilared dinner jacket or a copy of The Times of London, which is clearly a contemporary matrix. But I am joking, for the production as a whole did have a very effectionate feel for Shaw's life and times. Majorie Keilogg has devised some pleasantly ingenious settings. and the costumes - anachronistic shawi-collars apart - by Carrie F. Robbins are pleasantly stylish.

The performance of the evening undoublediy comes from Maria Tucci as Barbara. It is a difficult role because it can be played as part simpleton, part monster. Miss Tucci played it absolutely as if the -which is probably what Shaw prayed for in the first place. She is the modern, sensible, essentially humane, and genially heartless, woman.

Patricio Falkenhain is beautifully acerbic as Lady Britomart, which by the way, possibly the play's best role, a characterization worthy of Wilde or Coward. Mr. Stattel has fun with the drum-banging, Dionysiac Greek professor, and Mr. Swetland exudes urbane wickedness and uncommon common sense as the munitions typoon. I also liked Christopher Gaze as the silliest aldest son who never inherited, but the whole cast was exceptionally shipshape and neat.

Once in awhile you go to the theater expecting not too much, and you find yourself pleasantly surprised. A few more productions i...e this "Major Barbara" and I will find myself in the trenches defending Shaw against the infide s.

As Miss Obraztsova threw herself passinnately into the music, it was almost possible to over-look the vocal flaws—the passing notes that weren't quite on pitch, the vocal line that were far for some some and line that was far from seamless, the inflexibility of the vnice when it came to amail turns or scale-like passages.

Rachmaninoff's emotion-laden songs worked well in the mezzo-soprann's beautifully in such a song as "Melodie" dynamic approach and the singing was (Op. 21, No. 9), with its extreme range and loog planissimo note at the end. Miss Obraztsova's dark, low voice was effectively used in the Falla wurks, but the style was too unbridled and rough, without achieving a gutsy Spaoish maooer. The Dalila arias were a foretaste of a role the artist is to sing at the Met later this season. They mixed some exquisile phrases (the opening of "Amour, viens aider ma taiblesse") with powerful but roughshod singing. Among the encores were Faure's "Apres un rêve," which was sune with a nice light charm, and the unsuitable "O mio babbino caro," a lyric soprano aria from Puccini's "Gianni Schicchi."

Joho Wustman was the singer's superior pianist. In the Rachmaninnff songs, whose piaco parts are some-times as difficult as the composer's piaco solos, the playlog was especially sensitive eveo when hard pressed in some of the fast tempos.

This was the last recital io Avery Fsber Hall since it was rebuilt. The sound of the solo voice and solo instru-ment was just as clear and detailed as one could ask. RAYMOND ERICSON

But instead of gliding around the floor and snapping his fingers as he once did, Mr. Turner, who has put on a great deal of weight and walks with a cane, sits on a cushioned stool when he sings. Mr. Price handled "Ecco ridente" and his other vocal assignments with an appealingly youthful style but too much of the time during the evening the listener was being distracted from Rossini's love-ly tunes by the coincidental stage business.

"Loving Cousins" is a duil, unwholesome Italian film that aims at being soft-core, but is only soft. It has as much erotic energy as two slugs coup-ling. It tells of the interminably slow seduction of an inhibited boy-he looks like Pinocchio-by his liberated girl-cousio. The hot weather is emphasized. The camera takes close-ups of mouths untidily eating fruit and salad, and of bare legs crossing. The film, which opened yesterday at the Trans-Lux 86th Street and other theaters, is opaque and blotchy. It looks as if it had been knitted.

section, some jazz born players and as many catchy hit tunes as possible. For while it worked like a charm. Then a azzier hand tried to succeed on its own while Mr. Clayton-Thomas began a solo career. In the end the formula triumphed, and now Blood, Sweat and Tears is at the Waldorf-Astoria's Empire Room, without any of its original musicians but with Mr. Clayton-Thomas. "There sure is a lot of pomposity in this place," the vocalist remarked after his opening song, and it was true that the band and the room were not occessarily made for each other. Among rock aficionados the group is customarily dis-missed as slick, shallow, middle-of-the-road entertainment, but Blood, Sweat and Tears has always maintained high standards of musicianship, if oot of taste, and has given its horn soloists some space in which to improvise.

In the Empire Room, the band's more boisterous and rocking music seemed excessively aggressive, and the soloists, ca-pable as several of them are, were not really able to get off the ground. With musicians of the caliber of Roy McCurdy and Larry Willis in the rhythm section, the group was bound to be tight. Unfortunately, the cuteness of most of the arrangements and the vocalist's attempts at black mannerisms undercut the effectiveness of the individual players. In fact, Mr. Clayton-Thnmas's forays into blues and gospel-soul were positively embarrassing. Perhaps it is time for the group's jazz elements to shine a bit more brightly again. ROBERT PALMER

skates III, a fund-raising event for the United States Olympic Committee next Monday night at the Garden.

Free from the ngid confines of compulsory routines and the subjective views of judges, Mr. Curry, under the direction of Mass Tharp, has constructed a seven-minute routine that he believes will capture what skating is supposed to be, not what is packaged into the "uncreative atmosphere" of competitions and ice shows.

The routine will begin and end on traditional curves and include jumps and turns. But Miss Tharp's fascination with change of direction will be felt, along with her use of space and consid-

Rutgers, Quietly and Smoothly, Entering Big-Time Sports Era

By GORDON S. WHITE Jr. Special to The New York Times

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov. 10-Oklahoma, Indiana, Nurth Carolina State and Rutgers are prestigious state universities that dress their varsity athletes in hright red and white uniforms, receive considerable state funding and are dedicated to similar costly hut sometimes profitable big-time intercnllegiate athletic programs. The Soooers, Hoosiers and Wnlfpack arrived as super powers in college sports many years ago.

In the case of Rutgers, however, not many Jerseyans are aware that the state university bas been traveling in the same direction for nearly four years, for the trip to athletic supremacy has been so subtle and controlled that Rutgers has avoided most of the pitfalls. Rutgers wants bigtime athletics and all of its spin-off advantage But Rutgers does not want to be embarrassed by recruitiog violations to gain those ends as were Oklahoma, Iodiana and North Carolina State in the last 20 years.

Dr. Edward J. Bloustein, president of Rutgers University said: This move ioto higger time intercollegiate athletics is a danger. It's a seductive

But the 51-year-old Fulbright Scholar said: "Is it worth it? It is well worth it. Athletics identifies us as a state university in all aspects in everyooe's mind. There are many places we can eocounter error. The point at which this help to the university and its education becomes a means for its own cods is that danger point. But an athletic program is part of the legitimate cultural outlets of the people of a state and I think this is a cultural as well as educational, institution for the state of New Jersey."

The Mets were the ooly team that formally sent telegrams to Kepstein and the five clients they chose-Rudi, Grich, Baylor, Gullett and Campaneris. The Yankees have negotiation rights to Grich, Baylor, Gullett, Garland, Campaneris and Cash. In all, the 24 teams selected Kapstein's clients a total of 129 times-as many as all 10 by the A's, as few as one (Gullett) by both the Reds and the Braves. one (Tenace) by the Astros. The average is about five per team.

Jerry Kapstein is conducting an auction-but no more than two players to any one team except possibly three to the Angels because the Angels lost three. He knows the club owners can afford the price of liberty. In all their dealings with the Major League Players Associatioo, the club owners wisely never pleaded mability to pay higher salaries. If they had, their books would have been subject to inspectioo by Federal labor authorities.

The Conflict of Interest

"Owners are businessmen," Jerry Kapstein said. "The player gets only what the owner feels will create a return far more than the player gets -- in increased attendance, higher TV and radio rights, increased value of the franchise. The most intelligent owners will sign the most quality players because that way they're telling their fans they went all out for a winning team."

Jerry Kapstein, an attorney out of Harvard and Boston College Law School, has an apartment in Springfield, Va., but he's conducting the auction here where he grew up and where his family lives. His husky 28-year-old brother Dan, briefly a punter with the New England Patriots, often sits in on the negotiations along with their father, the executive director of the Rhode Island Teachers Association, while their mother answers the phone at home.

"Two tried to create the same family atmosphere among my players," Jerry Kapstein said. "I think I have."

But some baseball people wonder if representing 10 players might create a conflict of interest. The rules regarding free agents stipulate that "teams may not act in concert with each other and players may not act in concert with each other." If three of his players were to prefer to join, say, the Yankees or the Dodgers, which two would he

"But that's just it," he said. "I don't choose, the ball clubs choose. I don't set the priorities, the ball clubs do. Just like in the draft last week, the ball clubs chose the players-the players did not choose the ball clubs. Different ball clubs have different interests. There's been so much interest shown in everybody so far, I can't see that problem coming up. The players understand that the ball clubs are choosing

56 L Olympic Plans OfLakePlacid EAreCriticized

LARE PLACID, N.Y., Nov. 10 (AP) -The 1980 Winter Olympic Games, as currently planned, threaten to destroy the beauty and wilderness values of the Adirondack Mountains, especially the famed high peaks, the Sierra Club charged today.

Construction of a proposed 90-meter aki jump, with a lighted 260-foot cower; would be "the visual equivalent of putting an illuminated 26-story apartment huilding" in this mountain region, the conservation group said.

Other plans hy the Lake Placid Olympic Organizing Committee could lead to the unchecked growth of "rows and rows of new motels and shops lit by neon sign after neon sign," the San Francisco-based group said.

Representatives of the Sierra Club offered those criticisms at an all-day hearing here on the draft environmental impact statement prepared for the 1980 Games.

The impact statement, which is sup-posed to serve as a kind of environmen-tar "full disclosure document" on the overall effects of staging the Games here, must he approved by the Federal Government before any of the $49 mil-lion allocated for the games can be

A final environmental impact statement will be prepared after the public, environmental groups and various governmental agencies offer their com-ments and criticism on the draft.

The Department of Commerce's Economic Development Authority-the so-called "lead agency" for the Lake Placid Olympics-will hold another hearing on the statement next Thursday in Albany.

In its presentation today, the Sierra Club said it did not plan to take a position for or against the Games until the final environmental impact statement is released.

But the conservation group said the draft statement had serious drawbacks and some serious omissions, and it urged the organizing committee to reevaluate current plans.

Doubts on Economic Growth

James Dumont, as a vice president of the Atlantic chapter of the Sierra Club, sharply criticized the proposed location of a new $2.5 million, 90-meter ski jump at the same ski jump area used at the 1932 Olympics here. The jump tower would be visible from Mount Marcy, Mount Algonquin and numerous other high peaks in the area, and would he totally out of place in that wilderness region, be said.

He noted that the state Department of Environmental Conservatioo is currently taking down fire towers in Adi-rondack wilderness regions because they destroy the area's character. He suggested other mountains in the area as hetter sites for the proposed jump.

Dumont also criticized the draft statement for failure to include a detailed transportation plan and for fail-ure to make any provisions to control the proliferation of signs.

Another Sierra Club representative, Frederick Menz, took issue with the projections of economic growth made in the 703-page environmental impact statement. The 1980 Games may "not

Rutgers Quietly Enteri Major Leagues in S

The results of this drive to major athletic status have already been evident. Rutgers is riding a 16-game winning streak in football. The Scarlet Knights won 31 consecutive basketball games last season and finished fourth in the National Collegiate tournament. And the women'a swimming team has been undefeated for two straight seasons in dual-meet competition.

These things happened because Rutgers coaches went out and heavily recruited athletes with the blessing of and under the direction of Bloustein. and under the direction of biolisten. Nate Toran, as good a defensive end as there is in the nation, and his side-kick at left defensive tackle, John Alexander, are New Jersey athletes who remained in their home state for college football. A few years ago athletes of comparable ability, such as Rich Glover, Richard Wood and Franco Harris, left New Jersey to play for out-of-state powerhouses.

The change in direction for the onetime poor sister to Ivy League teams is musual in major college athletics. Without making sudden and obvious moves, Rutgers is dipping its big foe into the water to test the temperature, knowing full well it will eventually take the big plunge. Football schedules, for instance, have not changed drastic-ally just to prove the Scarlet can take on anyone. They can't. Seven of the viotories in the football schedules victories in the football streak were achieved against small-college teams. But Rutgers will play Tulane Saturday night and is feeling out Penn State and Pittshurgh on future games. That is "big time."

Two disparate personalities are most-ly responsible for the decision to move with caution into the major leagues. They are Bloustein and David (Sonny) Werblin, the Rutgers alumnus who is chairman of the New Jersey Sports and Exhibition Authority (Meadowlands complex) and a member of both the Board of Governors and Board of Trustees of Rutgers University. Werblin, a showman, and Bloustein, a tweed-jacket educator, have disagreed at times on the approach to Rutgers athletics. But each has made a deep impression. Blonstein said: "Our differences were of pacing and style. I'm less a flamboy-ant man and more paced to what a university is. Sonny is more attuned to organization. He says, 'This is what is going, so let's go.' We have clashed at times, But we have, I think reached a sense of mutual agreement."

Rutgers Students Apathetic

Werblin said: "We'd like to accomplish what all other state universities do and that's to have a good football team because it's easier for them to relate to the state legislature for their funds. It also gives the people in the state a state pride. People in the East don't seem to understand the function of a state university-at least in the field of athletics."

The former president of the New York Jets has aided in recruiting some athletes for Rutgers. He said: "I noticed in traveling around that we had so many New Jersey boys playing on championship teams it was a shame we couldn't keep them home. If we could inculcate a state pride in them

we could then have a team composed of kids We're on our way to de Both Werblin and I that Giants Stadium ir lands complex will be future Rutgers games. present the team can't 23.000-seat Rutgers St dents appear quite uniz recent football achievem One Rutgers official

Americans Score Upsets

HONG KONG, Nov. 10 AP)-Americans scored upsets today in the second round of the $75,000 Hong Kong international tennis tournament, a Grand Prix event.

Mike Machette downed seventh-seeded Brian Fairlie of New Zealand, 6-2, 7-5, and Hank Pfister toppled Corrado Barazzutti of Italy, No. 4, by 6-I, 6-3. With Roscoe Tanner and Billy Martin having been ousted yesterday, the num-

Todd Gets Jets' Call Again

Richard Todd will start his third straight game at quarterback for the Jets next Sunday when New York plays Tampa Bay at Sbea Stadium, the club disclosed vesterday.

In the previous two starts by the team's No. I draft choice, the Jets beat Buffain, 19-14, and lost to Miami, 27-7. The word oo Joe Namath was that he might see some action at quarterback Sunday "if he's bealthy." Namath has been bothered by a swollen right knee. Coach Lou Holtz warned that the Jets could not afford to take Tampa Bay for granted, and that there would be "a lot of pressure" on his club be-cause the Buccaneers were much better than their won-lost record of 0-9 indicated.

"They're impressive for an expansion team," said Holtz, who predicted a close game. "Their defense has been good, and they have simplified their running attack." The Jets, with a record of 2-7, will get some help on defeose with the return of Bob Martin, a rookie linebacker who had led the team io number of

Martin has been out with a hip injury. Two other injured players, howeve, will remain sidelined. They are Ed Marioaro, a fullback, and Jerome Barkum, a wide receiver. Barkum has not seen any action this seasoo. Tampa Bay lost to Miami, 23-20, oo a late field goal. Last Sunday, the Buc-caneers were leading Denver by 13-10 late io the third period before losing, 48-13.

"Sometimes I do stupid things," Steinberg says. "I'll call a play that isn't right. I koow these things, I just don't do them."

He apparently has done enough to satisfy his teammates and coaches. There are no second thoughts about the tight end at quarterback. "Every-bndy gets along with each other, it doesn't matter what color he is," said David Cruz, a Puerto Rican who is a co-captain and a starter at offensive and defensive halfback. "It was a battle between a few guys for the quarter-back spot and the bette man won." Cruz is one of the five wrestters on the football varsity. One of the others, Ron Bradley, a lineman, has been P.S.A.L. champinn at 180 pounds for three straight years. Cruz and the other co-captain, Darryl Dawkins, were on last year's team and are more concerned with eliminating the bad memories than whether their quarterback is white, black or green.

"I expericoced what bappeoed when we lost," said Dawkins. "I was crying." Dawkins, 6 feet 1 ioch and 210 pounds. is a middle linebacker and fullback who has the college scouts quite interested. Last year, he says, "when I made a mistake, I only had to worry about Mr. Daois [the defensive coach]. Now it seems there is a whole bunch of coaches up in the air with their eyes nn you. You get a little souped up from it, but you come down."

Dawkins, Cruz, Steioberg & Co. will need very little "souping up" oo Satur-day. They don't want to leave another erase

Ciinton will face Jefferson, the Brooklyn champion, at 1 P.M. at Clinton. At the same time, Bayside, the Queens champion, will be playing at Susan Wagner on Staten Island in the other semifinal. The final is set for Nov. 20 at Curtis Field on Staten Island. The game had been tentatively scheduled for Yankee Stadium, but several factors prevented that. Other facilities considered were Brooklyn College's AstroTurf Field, Fordham University and Jefferson's Orange Wave Stadium. With a 10:30 A.M. start and the possiblity of no Staten Island team in the game, the P.S.A.L. might have two teams playing in front of a lot of empty seats.

When a high school athlete averagea 26.3 points a game, the college scouts are usually ioterested. When that atblete happens to be a football player, look out! The player io this case is Ted Blackwell of New Provideoce in New Jersey. The senior balfback has 1,427 yards rushing in his team's seven straight victories and has scored 184 points. Last year he rushed for more than 1,500 yards and scored 172 points. "The linemeo like to block for him," said Blackwell'a coach, Frank Bottone, "Anytime they get him past the line of scrimmage they know he could break one." With the Jersey playoff system, Blackwell has a maximuo of fnur games left and a good shot at the state record of 246 points. Another runner with record potential is Tom Vigorito of DePaul in Wayne. He has 27 touchdowns and 166 points in eight games, all victories.

"The story of Cherry River remiods me of Alsab, the colt that was bought in the early 1940's for only $700 as a yearling," said Sammy Renick, the re-tired jockey. "He came up with life-time earnings of about $350,000. I never rode Alsab, but I rode and won many times with his sire, Good Goods, for Brookmeade."

Cherry River's credentials are so formidable that Aqueduct's racing secretary, Tommy Trotter, has him shar-ing top weight of 118 pounds with Entremont Farm's Cojak in tolay's sixfurlong feature. Twelve sprioters have been named and. if all go, the race will have a value of $55,100.

A Date With My Juliet?

"To be perfectly frank," said Oliver, "we've hrought Cherry River East main-ly because we feel he has a chance to become the year's champion sprinter. From here, he's to go to Keystone, where we hope he meets My Juliet in what might be considered a showdown for the champlooship." Although he has been to the races 59

"Alsab's earnings may not seem impres-sive by present day standards," said Re-nick. "But remember, that colt was racing in an era when purses were much smaller than today."

"Cherry River will never match Alsao for glamour," added Trotter. "But if he can win today and theo perhaps do the same at Keystone, who knows? If he's eventually named sprint champion, that'll be pretty good going for a horse that cost only 600 bucks."

Cowens Is Given Leave of Absence by Celtics averaged 18.4 points and 15.3 rebounds in the first four games, Dr. Thomas Silva, the Celtics' team doctor, said, "We have to respect his personal thoughts." When he was asked about the health of the 6-foot-9-inch Cowens, Silva said only that blood tests bad been taken, but no reports had been received yet. Auerbach added, "Anything concerning his physical condition is between Dave and the doctor. The doc-tor said there were no signs of depres-sion and that Dave had talked fluently and reasonably."

and reasonably. Cowens, once described as a "real life Huck Finn," is pretty much of a loner. He enjoys long walks through the woods and fishing.

"It gives you a perspective," Cowens once said. "You think about being idolized because you are a hasketball player. It's absurd. A baskethall player is nothing important. He really doesn't contribute to making peoples' lives happier. Not like a plumber or a fire-man, or even a businessman."

Cowen's mysterious request for a leave opened several areas of specula-

He was known to be upset when Paul Silas, a close friend, was traded to the Denver Nuggets. When Auerbach was reported to have told the players that he would not give Silas a new contract after his old one had expired, Cowens said, "give him the money." Cowens has had to work much harder without Silas, the game's best offensive rebounder.

In the past, Cowens has let it be known that he was not thrilled with Tom Heinsohn, the Celucs coach. Also, people have said he was upset after the Celtics lost four straight games after winning their first four this season. It was said to be the longest Boston losing streak while Cowens was in the lineup.

Cowens was also served with a subpoena last week as one of the defen-dants in a $1 million lawsuit for allegedly striking a fan during a Rockets' game last season. He was involved in a fight last week when Boston played the Spurs in San An-practices he has missed. The latest penalty of $100 was incurred Tuesday, when the 6-foot-9-inch Barnes was supposed to be at a Piston practice but was in St. Louis.

1970. He has played on two champion teams and was the league's most val-uable player in 1973.

The problem-plagued Barnes has been in turmoil ever since his playing days at Providence, when he struck a teammate with a tire iron. In his first two pro seasons he has sought to have his contract, half of which is in de-ferred payments, renegotiated by St. Louis and Detroit. When he became a Piston he failed to report to training camp and was suspended briefly before the season for missing practice.

He also must answer a charge next Thursday for allegedly carrying a handgun in his lugged during a check at Detroit's Metropolitan Airport. Barnes has been unable to play because of a strained ligament in his right ankle, which is in a protective walking cast. Despite Barnes's problems, Oscar Feldman, the Pistons' general manager, hopes that the powerfully-huilt forward will be able to help the Detroit team. Feldman has denied reports that he is

"I have a rejected dozens of offers for Barnes," said Feldman by telephone from Detroit. "We have no intention fo getting rid of him. We're still convinced he will contribute to our club.

Sports Today

But obviously I'm disturbed that he's missing practice. He should be at those sessions learning our plays and ways. Now, I understand he went to St. Louis to visit his cwn doctor because he still has pain in the leg. He has an appointment with our doctor Friday to have the cast removed. We'll just have to wait and see."

Kevin Loughery and Butch van Breda Kolff, the excitable coaches of the Nets and New Orleans Jazz, respectively, continue to make befty contributions to the National Basketball Association technical-foul fund. the cost is $75 for the first violation. An additional $150 is levied, plus automatic expulsion from the game, if a second is called, There were five technical fouls called in the 110-99 victory by the Jazz over the Nets Tuesday night Van Breda Kolff was slapped with two and Loughery one. Van Breda Kolff's technical came tess than 24 hours after he orom-ised restraint, and it brought his intal to six in nine games. Loughery has been charged with nine in 11 games.

Loughery played the game under protest because of a technical foul awarded to Mel Daniels, Loughery bas 48 hours to file the protest, and must send a filing fee of $1,000 to the league office It's doubtful he will do that because there was no rule violatioo.

With the aclivation of Butch Beard and the success of Mo Layton, who sparked the Knicks' 106-97 triumph over the Washington Bullets with 12 points in a 1012-minute span, New York placed Jim Barnett on waivers. The action reduces the roster to 13 players, one over the limit. When Spencer Haywood comes off the injured list after four more games, the Knicks will have to cut another player. The 32year-old Barnett, the Boston Celtics' 1966 first-round draft choice, bas played with six teams. The Knicks ob-tained the 6-4 Barnett from the Jazz during the 1974-75 season.

Whalers' Tax Escape

Hockey Association team's home games at the 10,612-seat Civic Center. This automatically exempts tickets from the 10 percent amusement tax, which is divided evenly between state and city. The deal is expected to give the Whalers a windfall of about $135,000 this season in admission taxes that would otherwise have gone to the state.

Heffernan said the commission would seek to have the amusement-tax statute ameoded at the next session of the Legislature, beginning in January.

The Problem of Enormous Buildup of International Debt

The biggest single worry in fioancial markets these days is over the ecor-mous buildup of international debt-much of it owed to private commercial banks. There is no way to conceal the Changer that some heavy borrowers from abroad may be unable to meet their obligatioos. The Nobody really knows just Reconomic bow large the mountain of international debt is. But Scene '

what is important is not the aggregate figure, which runs into fundreds of billions of dollars, but the ability of particular nations to meet their payments. The accompanying chart, based on estimates of the Morgan Guaranty Trust Company and The New York Times, lists some of the natioos that Government officials and private bankers in the Uoited States are most coocerned

About today. At the bead of the list staods Britain, with total borrowings of $45 billioo, including both public and private debts. Close behind it come the Comecco contries—the Soviet Unico and its stabilities in Factors Europe, with $40 satellites in Eastern Europe-with $40

Brazil, Mexico and Italy are all in the over $20-billion class. France, Fin-land, and Indonesia each has outstand-ing foreign debts of close to $10 billion.

Oil Importers on Worry List

Virtually all the oil-importing devel-oping countries belong on the worry list; collectively, their external debts exceed $150 billion.

A vast amount of foreign lending-mostly in collars-has taken place market, through banks in the major European countries, the Bahamas, Canada, Panama, the Caymao Islands, Japan and Singapore. The net foreign-chrreocy liabilities of Euromarket banks in 1970 were $70 billion. By 1973 "the figure had reached $160 billion. Today it exceeds $275 billioo and is Today it exceeds $275 billioo and is still growing. The scaremoogers of the world, who seem never to be in short supply, are once again writing scenarios about how the entire world monetary system fould collapse if ooe or two countries, where to go under. or fact and fictioo. To be aure, the motivation of those who poob-pooh the danger of national defaults to private banks and other countries may also be commercial—to protect their own past loans (or follies) and ward off a guinary blast to guilt and ward off a ruinous blow to public confideoce that could itself bring the mountain of debt down with a calamitous crash.

Can Risk Be Evaluated?

Io the midst of the Cassandras and the Pollyannas, is there any way to evaluate the risk that the Uoited States and world ecooomy is now facing from the overextension of foreign loans?

The question of foreign roans? The question cannot be answered in the abstract—as thoogh the future somehow already exists. Everything de-pends oo national actions still to be taken łaken.

taken. One critical action will be taken oext mooth when the Organization of Pe-troleum Exporting Countries decides whether and by how much to increase the price of oil. If OPEC puts the price up substantially—say by 10 percent or more—this would aggravate the pay-ments problem of all oil-importing ments problem of all oil-importing conotries and push some closer to the brink of default. Can the United States and others dissuade OPEC from a stiff increase?

Some crucial decisions lie in the hands of private bankers, not public officials, Many bankers feel that they have already lent too much to poor credit risks. But if they cut off leading now, they may bring on the defaults-aod the crash-they fear. If they go oo lending to poor credit risks, how-ever, they will be throwing good mooey after bad, and only increasing the potential size of the future collapse. What can government do to resolve

this dilemma

A Crucial Question for Carter This will be the crucial economic question facing the Carter Administration. The United States remains the key decisioo-maker in the world economy both because of its great economic size and also because there is no other na-tion that can assume the political leadership required for a monetary rescue operation.

The first requisite for such a rescue is a faster rate of expansion in the three most powerful and stable ecoco-mies of the industrial world, the United States, West Germany and Japan. Thanks to the intense persuasiveness of President Ford's economic and financial advisers, especially Secretary of the Treasury William E. Simon and the chief economic counselor, Alan Greenspan, the business and financial community has come to regard rapid expansion as the greatest danger facing the United States and world economy. Worry about a faster rate of econom-ic growth-held to be the likely cause of renewed inflation-bas beeo depressing the stock and bond markets at home and abroad ever since Jimmy Carter's election. However, the financial markets may be completely wroog. At least some of the most sophisticated members of the financial community think so. For instaoce, Rimmer de Vries, the top international economist of Morgan Guaranty, says a stronger fiscal push by the Carter Administration would help restore balance to the world economy in two ways: by strengthening loan demand at bome, thereby reduciog foreign lending, and by io-creasing the United States demand for foreign goods, thereby improving world commodity prices and sales, and conse-quently increasing tha foreigo earnings of the weaker countries. Mr. de Vries thinks the United States will now do its part, but he and many other ecocomists are more worried about Japao and West Germany, whose conservatism seems unshakeo by the persistent world slump.

The International Monetary Fund, Mr. de Vries argues, ahould raise more money, not just from the better-off in-dustrial countries but particularly from OPEC surplus countries, under the General Agreement to Borrow, and make additional funds available to countries in danger of default. There are other instrumentalities that could be devised to stretch out debt and refi-

Treasury Secretary Simoo took a hard lice at the Manila meetings LM.F. and World Bank against making a lot more mooey available to debtors uotil they had made the necessary adjust-ments to their own economies to stop domestic inflatioo and cut their borrowing needs.

There is, always, a tough decision about when and how much to lend a dubious credit risk—lest he premature-ly be relieved of the necessity of doing himself what must be done to re-establish his credit. But doing too little and waiting too long can also be a prescrip-tion for disaster. The fundamental issue can be oversimplified as Hooverism vs.

Copper: Gloomy Picture for the Industry

By GENE SMITH

Two months ago, market letter writers were forecasting that copper would rise to an average of 80 cents a pound. They saw the price at $1 by the end of 1977.

But instead of rising, copper has been falling since early October. To-day it is still around the 70-cent level. And almost no one sees any increase In the months ahead for the industry, which faces the likelihood of a strike in mid-1977 after the expiration of labor contracts.

The domestic producer price for copper wire bars reached the 74-cent level in July and remained there through September. On Oct. 3-al-most at the moment that speakers at a forum sponsored by the American Metal Market, e trade paper, in the Pierre Hotel were predicting that prices would hold, with one even forecasting an increase to 77 cents "soon"-the Phelps Dodge Corporation and Asarco Inc. announced unexpectedly that they were cutting prices by 4 cents a pound.

An Oversupply in Warehouses An Oversupply in Warehouses There is no question but that there is an oversupply of copper in ware-houses today. At the start of this year stocks of copper in London Metal Exchange warehouses totaled 555,000 metric tons. At the end of last week they reached a high of 581,125 metric tons, according to Dr. Joseoh Zimmerman, vice president of the Miles Metal Corporation. the Miles Metal Corporation.

Likewise, Commodity Exchange warehouse stocks that stood at 100,-000 tons at the start of 1976 reached a new high of 177,865 tons on Nov.

5, Dr. Zimmerman said. While there have been no major layoffs in the industry, many opera-tions are being maintained on a fiveday instead of a seven-day work week. The Kennecott Copper Corporation, the nation's largest domestic producer, noted that in the third quarter its metal miniog division had produced a profit against a year-ago loss, largely because of the higher copper prices. But, it warned that improvement in the copper business would depend on the rate of general economic recovery, which it said had slowed in the third quarter. Since then, prices have been lowered and demand has slackened. In addition, world supplies from foreign producers are running higher than originally expected. For example, Zambian output this year is estimated at 600,000 metric tons, up 20,000 tons over 1975. Zaire's output is forecast at 500,000 tons, also up 20,000 tons and Chilean output, also up 20,000 tons at $20,000 tons, is expected to reach 900,000 tons in 1977.

American Motors Deficit Sets Record as Sales Lag General Motors Offering

a $200 Rebate to Jan. 10 on Subcompact Cars

By WILLIAM K. STEVENS Special to The New York Times

DETROIT, NOV. 10-The American lotors Corporation, mired in a serious sales slump for nearly a year, reported today a record loss of $51.1 million for the three months ended Sept. 30. This was the last quarter of A.M.C.'s fiscal year, a year in which thee ompany's net loss totaled $46.3 millioo. It was the second consecutive 12-month loss for the smallest of the four United Stetes automobile manufecturers. American Motors had a deficit of $27.5 million in fiscal 1975. The 12-month loss reported today was the third largest of the ninc fiscal-year losses the company has had in its 23-year history. Meanwhile, the Chevrolet division or the General Motors Corporation an-nounced a $200 "cash bonus," or rebate, on all sales of its subcompact Chevette and Vega cars purchased between tomor-row and next Jao. 10.

A.M.C.'s deficit for the July-through-September quarter of 1976 was substantially greater than had been expected by some auto-industry analysts, who had es-timated it in the vicinity of $30 million. And it exceeded A.M.C.'s previous record loss of $47.8 million in the quarter ended March 31, 1975, which was in the depths | for the first 10 months. of the recession.

The picture is especially grim American Motors because its competitors, the Big Three auto makers, have been accumulating record profits this year. A.M.C. insists that the source of its trou-bles is a fall-off in sales of smaller cars, the segment of the domestic market in which it mainly operates and on which it has staked much of its fortuces. Last week, in an attempt to spur sales,

A company spokesman said today that deal larger comp ers were reporting increased "floor traf-fic" as a result of the price cut. He said and that not only Gremlins but also other as its own. A.M.C. cars were selling better as a result. Whether the tactic will produce long-term gains remains unknown. G.M.'s Chevette and Vega and A.M.C.'s

Gremlin are all in the subcompact classthe smallest cars made io the United States, Sales in this class for the industry as a whole were off 9 percent during the first 10 months of 1976, compared with the year-earlier pace.

But some industry analysis say that the softness in subcompact sales is not the ooly reason for A.M.C.'s troubles. While sales of all domestic subcompacts aod small foreign cars were off 9 percent, the Gremlin's sales were down 28 perceot

Likewise, A.M.C.'s subcompact Pacer was off 21 perceot. WASHINGTON, Nov. 10-Probably no other subject these days arouses expressions of business frustration with Washington as easily as the Arabs' economic boycott against Israel. This is largely because the boycott is, on its face, a simple issue about which there might well be substantial national agreement. In reality, how-ever, the boycott is a complex and divisive subject, one that is poorly understood. Since early October the Government has been making available the names of companies "complying" with the boycott, companies that as of today have reported 851 boycott requests.

There are several reasons for the confusion. One big reason is the fact that, while United States policy op-poses. Coal? Coal. In the 19th century, dozens of coal mines flourished in the area, only to be abandoned as oil and Appalachian coal became readily available. And now, in the wake of the energy crisis, serious attempts are under way to redevelop the resources.

Two drilling rigs, at work since late June, have produced 11 test boles that. the sponsors of the operation contend . indicate potential reserves of 250 million tons. The project is scheduled to last five years and 100 holes, and eventually result in a geological map of the region-known to scientists as the Narragansett Basin-which can be used to induce private companies to begin commercial mining.

Fuel Described as 'Highly Desirable'

"This is a potentially rich source of energy for New England and we're trying to prove it," said the Rev. James Skehan, project bead and director of the Western Observatory-Boston College, a geological research institute. "So far, this appears to be highly desirable coal."

To date, the investigation has yielded . dozens of wooden crates containing two-inch-thick strategraphic borings, now being assayed at Weston. Some of the seams appear to be 25 feet thick, according to Joseph Pecoraro, chief of energy resource development for the Federal Energy Administration's Bos-ton office, and the sulfur content is less than three-tenths of 1 percent-

However, the enterprise faces a number of hurdles. Most immediately, the mooey_$226,000 from the National Science Foundation and $133,000 from various local companies and economic development groups-threatens to run out by the end of January. The group is hoping to produce enough scientific evidence by then to draw oew moozy.

that is organizing the fund-raising. "I can't exude great coofidence that we won't have a break in the drilling." And even if coal turns out to be in the right place in satisfactory quan-tity, commercial production is far from assured. Unlike the fields of Peonsylvania, southeastern Massachusetts is densely populated aod although tha test drilling has yet to engeoder a popular uprising, no one knows whether the peace will last.

any price changes for the balance of this year. He pointed out that there is roughly a 15-cent price differential between the domestic producers' price and those on the London Metal Exchange.

"Frankly." he said in a telephone in-terview. "the domestic producers had no business raising their prices to 74 cents. That was purely a speculative move. When they went back to 70 cents they were being more realistic. There's just no reason to lower prices now."

Dr. Zimmerman said there is also the question of what the Carter Administration will do with regard to wage and price controls.

There's oo reason to cut price further. Who would want prices frozen at the low-end?

H. Myles Jacob, chairman of the Inspiration Consolidated Copper Compa-ny said yesterday that the "fourth quarter will not be nearly as good as the third because prices have dropped and there has been a major decrease in on the subject of copper prices.

weeks? Eighteen months? It's an imponderable situation."

The most recent issue of Metals Week, a McGraw-Hill publication, is somewhat more bullish. Citing estimates of Chase Econometrics Associaves, the trade publication forecast cop-per prices "should reach 90 cents per pound by the end of next year."

It said the forecast took ioto consideration a "long" domestic copper strike at midyear --- "one that will allow producers to reinstate the historical supply-demand balance and push prices up if for no other reason than to cover the costs of new labor cootracts." 'Everybody Living Off Inventories'

Herbert Barchoff, presideot of East-ern Rolling Mills Inc., in the Bronx, said there are "two possible conflicting forces overhanging the market-the possibility of a General Motors strike and a boom market that could result from the possible outbreak of hostili-ties in Africa." He contioued:

"Barring either eventuality, I can see nothing on the upside until the end of January. We're going through a peri-od where everybody is living off inventories with consumption up 15. to 20 percent over last year. The only plus factor would be a continuation of the pickup in housing starts that would be felt in this industry a mooth or so later. The season to be jolly is anything but that for the copper iodustry. I see nothing really on the bullish side, what with roughly 60 percent of the free world's copper production being sold below cost."

Dr. Zimmerman generally agreed with Mr. Barchoff's outlook and said the question now is how to lose less money-maintain production at the said he believed the industry could stand a three-month strike in 1977 but that it was a foregone conclusioo that the workers would get higher wages. or fringe benefits.

The costs will obviously go up and the producers can't make them up immediately and the consumers are not really concerned because they have ample supplies on hand," he said.

Third-quarter earnings of the major copper companies do not give a true picture because of their diversified operations. The Kennecott Copper Corporation, for example, showed thirdquarter net income of $4.8 million against a loss of $20.5 million a year ago. However, the 1975 figure in-cluded a loss of $1.5 million from the closing of a plant and an adverse tax adjustment of $3.5 million.

The Anaconda Company also had a turnaround, posting a $6.7-million net income against a loss of $6.6 million the 1975 third quarter. The 1976 oet was after a tax loss carryforward credit.

Bethlehem Steel Cuts Operations Because of Slackening Demand

The Bethlenem Steel Corporatioo, second to the United States Steel Corporation in production, announced yesterday that it had closed certain operations "due to a slackening in de-mand for steel."

He said about 850 of the plant's 17,850 workers there would be laid off indefinitely.

He also noted that Bethlehem had closed one of its five blast furnaces at Lackawanna, N. Y., and had adjusted certain other operations because of a reduction in orders for steel products. The spokesman said ebout 300 of the 12,000 employees there would be laid off.

In this more northerly region, the exploration revealed, the coal becomes more bituminous, a softer, more easily burned type particularly suitable for power plants. However, even this coal has a high "ash" or mineral content that would require purifying processes now becoming technologically feasible. The rigs in operation, which resemble 90 percent of our advertising budget in The Times. For the past 17, we've run every week in the Sunday Times Travel section. It's paid off."

Empress Travel's agency: Alden Advertising Agency, Inc.

"In 1957, Empress Travel was a one-man, one-location business. Today we have over 30 retail operations—one of the largest retail travel chains in the country. Obviously, we wouldn't have grown if we didn't offer a desirable product. But where we do the offering is just as important.

"The Times Travel section is like a department store. Every segment of the total travel market shops it. We reach ethnic markets, young marrieds, families, singles, groups, you name it. In fact, if you consider anyone over a certain income as a potential vacation traveler, then The Times gives us access to a mass market. "And the response is immediate. We're open on Sunday and great numbers of phone calls and walk-ins come in on the day our ad appears. We also get good response from outside the New York area—calls from all over the country, including the West Coast.

"The Times has terrific trade impact as well. Every important hotel and airline executive reads the Travel section and sees our Sunday ads before the trade publications come out that week.

"To put it simply, The Times is the best travel advertising medium there is."

during its last fiscal year, manufactures "articulated character figures" and wardrobes for them; games and toys most of them tied in with popular per-sonalities or TV programs. Cher is its best seller, but it also has Muhammad Ali, Starsky and Hutch, the Fonz and, some Star Track items. About a quarter are made in the United States and the rest in the Orient.

When the company decided to shop around for an agency it leaked that it was looking to the press and the resulting stories elicited calls from about 40 eager ageocles. Mr. Pierce trimmed the list to 26, each of which was invited down to the Mego offices for individual brief-ings. He said yesterday that "the level and caliber" of the agency representa-tives was one of the determining fac-

The list of 26 was cut to six to three. The three each gave presentations on their media and creative departments and their strengths.

Of the three, only Bates had had previous toy advertising experience and this was a deciding factor, Mr. Pierce said, He didn't mention Mr. Zuckert's personality.

Stockbrokers' Magazine

Tolman Gaffs of Newport Beach, Calif., is a two busicess-card man. One ideotifies him as president of an advertising agency. The other as president of an ad-vertising agency. The other as presi-dent of the Plaza Publishing Company. The two-year-okl agency specializes in investor relatioos and running it Mr. Geffs discovered what he calls "a hole in the media." No publication directed specifically at stockbrokers. So he started one called The Regis-fered Representative, now a bimonthly that doubles its frequency in February. Almost 35,000 copies are being mailed free (controlled circulation) to individ-ual brokers or brokerage offices. A black and white full-page ad goes for $2,400 and there is a $1,000 pre-mium for four-color.

Mr. Geffs, wearing his publisher's hat, reports that he went into the black with the second issue now going into the mails.

Similar considerations that are both economic and political enter into the ar-gument over whether any tax reduction should be in the form of an income tax cut or should focus on low-income iodi-viduals by doing something about Social Security taxes.

Those who want to cut Social Security taxes note that that is the only way to use the tax system to belp millions of families and individuals who pay no families and individuals who pay no Federal income tax. Recent changes in the tax laws have exempted from income the tax laws have exempted from income tax any siogle persoo who does not make more than $2,700; any husband and wife who do not make more than $4,100 and any family of four that does oot make more than $6,100. A simple income tax rebate would be of no help to them. Mr. Carter himself, in his news coofer-ence last Thursday, said that the objec-tive of any tax cut would be "to stimulate purchasing power among the average American family and would be heavily oriented toward the lower payroll level." That sounded, to many, like forgiveness of Social Security taxes, although Mr. Carter refused to specify that this was what be meant. The problem with proposing some sort

The problem with proposing some sort of temporary exemption from Social Se-curity taxes is that many people, in and out of Congress, object on philosophical grounds to tamperiog with the tax base of the Social Security system. The notion of trying to help the lower-income group in this fashion is seen as simply too radi-cal to get through Congress quickly, and quick action may be what is needed in January, in the view of the establishment liberals.

Mr. Tannenbaum said he didn't believe that this was something the con-sumer really wanted and cited his agency's research to back up the opinion.

What consumers want, be said, is "more informative product information in advertising on which they can base their buying decisions." That, of course, led to comparative advertising, of which be is an advocate.

How Carriers Spent It

The advertising spending for all pub-lic carriers—airlines, trains, steamship lines and buses—increased 5 percent in measured media last year compared with 1974, according to a study by Harris, Kerr, Forster & Company. Newspaper advertising was up 9 per-cent. TV was the only medium showing a decrease. The total spending was $218.6 mil-lion, of which $137 million was contrib-uted by domestic zirlines. That was an increase of only I percent.

Car-renting companies were also in-cluded in the study and they showed the biggest advance in spending-54 percent to $21.1 million. Bus lines spending also soared 41 percent to $10.5 million.

TV: 'Gibbsville' on NBC Tonight

A Fine Cast in Stories Based Loosely on O'Hara's-On Public TV, a Moving Drama About Nisei

By JOHN J. O'CONNOR

NBC has mercifully laid to rest "Gemini Man" in the big electronic graveyard for failed series. With some jiggling of the schedule, it is being replaced tonight ot 10 with "Gibbsville," which is based loosely, very loosely, on stories of John O'Hara.

As a pilot a couple of seasons ago, "Gibbsville" had Frank Gilroy, the playwright ("The Subject Was Roses"), performing the duties of writer and director. Mr. Gilroy barely survived the bureaucratic mills of television and studio executives. In fact, he openly declared that he was not eager to work in a television factory again—and his connection with this series appears to be in name only. But Mr. Gilroy did manage to retain at least a modicum of O'Hara in the pilot, a tone and at-mosphere that didn't totally violate the investigation of the same autobio. the intentions of the semi-autobio-graphical "Gibbsville" stories.

Even that much is gone now as television's "Gibbsville" emerged io a formula closer to radio's old serial "Out Gal Sunday." The time is the 1940's in the small New England town, but it could be any time in the world of soap opera as an offscreen narrator specks of "a small but growing town" with its roots in mining, of the "truo stories" to be found behind the doors, of secret lives and dreams.

John Savage returns to play Jim Malloy, a newspaper reporter in hus 20's who is "discovering life and himself." Gig Young is back as the veteran reporter. Ray Whitehead, once internationally renowned and now reduced to small-town dimensions by alcohol. Biff McGuire is better than anyone has a right to expect as Jim's father, a doctor. And tonight's "guest stars" are Walter Pidgeon and Jane Wyatt, por-traying an elderly playwright and his wife. There is, obviously, oo shortage of acting talent.

But there is also no shortage of television's curious compulsion to overload an already wobbly vehicle, to touch as many demographic bases as. possible. This evening's episode teatures not one but two key study lines: Jim and Ray investigating an explosion at the local coal and iron company. much to the displeasure of the town's establishment, and the elderly play-wright taking to his death bed with style and propriety. In between, Ray drinks in the local saloon, Jim is seduced by an immigrant lass in the pool duced by an immigrant lass in the pool at the country club, the elderly play-wright's wife can't get a doctor for a house call, and so on-all stuffed into about 50 minutes. Everything is used; nothing is seriously explored. "Gibbs-vill" flickers briefly before our eyes and disappears. For immediate comparison, there is this eveniog's presentation at 9 on "Visions," a public television series designed to bring original dramas to television. "The Gold Watch." written by Momoko Iko, is about a Japanese-American family living on the West Coast in the months before and after Japan's 1941 attack on Pearl Harbor.

It is a flawed play. The structure is annoyingly contrived. Key incidents too frequently take place off stage. What is supposed to be dramatic is reduceo, through clumsiness, into melodrama

But, for all of its deficiencies. "The Gold Watch" is both moving, and powerful. The play has the passionatc urgency of revelation. It is not using its material; it is painfully searching for truths. This is poor family, exploit-ed by nature and the local bank ("We can always count on our Japanese folk to pay us back") and envied for their industry by their white and bigoted neighbors. The father is too proud to neighbors. The father is too proud to accept charity. The mother desperately seeks out tokeos of kindness for her children. Poverty is breeding shame-and hate among them. After Pearl Harbor, the family and their Japanese neighbors debate the fu-ture. The tensions within the commu-nity are brought to the surface. The assimilated are confronted with the traditionalists the Catholics with the traditionalists, the Catholics with the Buddhists, the militants with the com-promisers—all of them facing the humiliation of internment in United States camps. "Our Japanese folk," it seems, are as complicated, or human, as any other folk. "The Gold Watch" cannot be forgot-ten easily. Lloyd Richards has directed with telling sensitivity. And the acting is generally superb, especially from a performer named Mako in the role of the father. The credits offer "special thanks to the East West Players for assistance.'

Owning Your Own Home-The Shattered American Dream

"If you can't spend $60,000-we really don't have anything to show you."

What used to be a realistic goal-saving up to buy your own home-has suddenly become an / almost impossible dream for the average young couple in the New York area.

What are the realistic prospects for the future? Will you need a second job, a second mortgage, or an extended family household to survive?

RECEDINIC

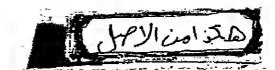

- It was a great night for the winning candidates. And NBC News had a pretty fair night itself.
- For it was NBC News that attracted the largest audience on Election Night-seven per cent more than the second network and 65 per cent more than the third.*
- What's more, NBC News was the first to signal victory for Jimmy Carter. Its projection—at 3:30 a.m. EST—of his win in Mississippi gave Carter the clincher. Attracting the largest audience and serving that audience with fast, accurate projections was a demonstration of a news organization functioning at its very best. That's the way the press saw it, too:
- "NBC had the best national coverage of the election...Chancellor and Brinkley managed a cohesise style of reportage that was television at its best."
- Bill Granger, Chicago Sun-Times.

(22: امن الا

- "NBC...seemed to best achieve the often elusive marriage of the verbal and the visual that was needed Tuesday night." Sander Vanocur, Washington Post.
- "The team of John Chancellor and David Brinkley easily outshone their counterparts at the other two networks...the NBC News physical setup was also far superior to that of the competition." Bill Hickey, Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"...some of my best friends are involved in crime."

66 Muggings. Petty theft. Drugs.

They're helping to stop them, not cause them. Right now, we're working to get more lights on our streets. And we're organizing a project to get people in the community to properly lock their doors and windows.

We're also involved in a clean-up campaign for our parks. And a letter writing campaign for a new library.

You see we feel it's up to us to try to make the world around us a better place to live.

For us. Our families. Our community.

So we support the things we believe in. And work to change the things we don't.

I guess that's part of knowing what you want from life. And recognizing you should do something about it today, because there'll be something else to do tomorrow.99

The way Michael and his friends feel about social responsibility is an example of the new values many young adults share today.

And because PsychologyToday responds to those values, it attracts over four and a half million people every month.

People who believe in living their dreams today, not tomorrow.

For example, according to Simmons, more of PT's readers write their congressman, attend public meetings and get involved in community affairs, than the readers of just about every other major magazine.

Our readers are young, educated and always ready to fight for what they believe.

And PT readers set the trends others follow.

PT readers live their dreams today, not tomorrow. Psychology Today
